The Honourable Louis P. Cecile, Q.C., LL.D. Minister of Public Welfare - Province of Ontario

May it Please Your Honour:

The undersigned has the honour to transmit herewith the Twenty-fourth Annual Report of the Department of Public Welfare, for the Fiscal Year 1954-55.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your Obedient Servant, Louis P. Gecile,

To: The Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Q.C.,

THE YEAR 1955 may well be recorded as the period of Ontario's biggest boom with more persons than ever before obtaining benefit from the returns of their labour. Production from natural resources has been particularly buoyant because of the astonishing industrial expansion. Notable gains in construction and manufacturing in all its forms have occurred. Prosperity has been, indeed, evenly and widely distributed, giving wholesome opportunities to people throughout the Province.

Employment is plentiful for even those persons who have previously been only marginally employable. The number of persons eligible for public assistance is comparatively low because of the favourable conditions which apply in Ontario. Major factors which also influence the granting of aid relate to the resources acquired by people as a result of long continuance of earnings, together with better medical services and hospital treatment. All these advantages, opportunity, resources, health, as well as the will to accomplish a livelihood have resulted in proportionately fewer people applying for assistance.

Twenty-five years of human progress, with accompanying stresses, have been recorded since the Department of Public Welfare was established. Some $653,760,593 has been distributed in all, with the funds obtained directly from Provincial revenue amounting to $401,715,542.

These have been years of development and concern. Public Welfare as a department of Government has grown from its fledgling state to one of prime importance, with direct interest in the lives of thousands of citizens. Facing unknown and unseen commitments for the future, experience was acquired largely on a trial and error basis. Diversified problems in the field of human betterment lie ahead and relate mainly to a more constructive treatment of human failures. Emerson has said: "Man does not live by bread alone, but by faith, by admiration, by sympathy". All these are the essential elements which lead to understanding. Along with skills in treatment they go far in easing distress.

New cases accepted for aid during the financial year, including re-instatements, numbered 11,620. These are blind and disabled persons, Mothers' Allowances beneficiaries, and Old Age Assistance recipients. Every advantage within legislative authority is extended to applicants, but even with the use of such a policy, a decline in numbers is noticeable.

The total number of persons receiving assistance in March of 1955 are shown with the expenditures for the fiscal year.

Social Security

Twenty persons in each thousand of Ontario's population receive assistance in the categories shown in the above table. Little variance in numbers is noted in comparison with the previous year and little change is anticipated during the coming year. It should be observed that the persons qualifying for aid are those who are virtually removed from the labour market. They are persons who are accepted for care as a government responsibility.

Additional groups receiving contributions, but otherwise provided for would include those in active, chronic and custodial hospitals. Another large group obtains universal Old Age Security pensions, while Unemployment Insurance benefits cover the majority of persons who are available for employment, but without jobs. Persons, including some of the above, who might be more or less classified as in needy circumstances, would likely total a further three percent of the population.

We are far removed from the doleful depression days of the 1930's which were accompanied by panic, suffering, and almost total insecurity. We are now better able to cushion the shocks of any major social upheaval. There are now more favourable means of removing extremes of need and hardship. Great social reforms have occurred in the past three decades. Maladiustment of society is being recognized in Ontario as elsewhere on the continent. A solution has largely been found to cope with the problems of dependency. This is in contrast to the humiliation which frequently coloured the noble principles of charity-giving in the past. Legislation with privileges and rights often gives advantage to social casualties on a more orderly basis.

Determination of need has varied implications related to the type of programme and the governmental unit administering the assistance. The rights of individuals are progressively being better recognized. The removal of all "means test" conditions, however, would be impractical, and could only be replaced by a contributory insurance plan. The major defect in the treatment of dependency in Canada is the lack of a universal insurance scheme.

An examination of the American Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance scheme (social insurance) proves that this method is a most useful device in accomplishing economic protection. Under this system, basic income protection is afforded retired workers, their families, and survivors in cases of untimely death. Employers, workers, and the self-employed contribute to the system during working years to build up the funds from which payments are made. Present so-called welfare measures in Canada, namely, Old Age Security and Family Allowances, fall far short in providing sufficient funds to maintain persons unable to participate in the labour market. They must surely be considered mainly as economic measures to distribute funds to as many people as possible and, thus, increase purchasing power. The funds granted are decidedly limited for the needs of people who must look to this source for maintenance.

In contrast, the coverage and benefits available to workers in the United States are a realistic approach and give advantages to their citizens in the same manner as other forward-looking countries. Nine out of ten workers now participate in the plan, and this self-supporting social security system is immeasurably relieving taxation demands. The programme gives the ultimate in rights to individuals, in the same manner as private insurance.

This self-supporting social security system allows, without loss of benefit, earnings up to $1,200 yearly for those under 72 years of age. Persons beyond this age may receive any amount of earnings in addition to insurance payments.

In September 1954, the average Old Age benefit granted to a retired worker, age 65 years or older with no dependants, under the American plan, was $56.00 a month. When the worker and his wife both received benefits the average for the family was $98.00. Families consisting of a widowed mother and two children averaged $126.00. The average payment in November, 1955 for Old Age beneficiaries increased to $61.80, with corresponding increases for other categories.

Nine out of ten mothers in the United States are now assured of receiving benefits if the wage earner in the family dies. There is every evidence in the United States that local governments (state and municipal) will find their financial burdens eased because their self-contained insurance scheme is effectively providing for their workers. Greater specialization in providing extraordinary services on the part of state governments will be possible with the subsequent decline in case-loads.

Administrative Operations

The administrative detail within our Department is now well integrated, but constant and searching methods for improvement must be maintained. We require every assurance that the persons served are receiving, within regulations, all benefits due them. The internal activities must provide for orderly procedures in the accurate processing of cases. Every facility must be extended in the rapid treatment of cases. All consolidated internal operations must be related to the particular services rendered throughout the Province on the part of the field workers, municipalities, and Homes for the Aged authorities, both public and charitable. The Children's Aid Societies, Day Nurseries, and other organizations featuring welfare services, likewise, become a part of these total and overall functions.

The essentials in administration of the programmes place a heavy onus on all members of the staff. It is believed, however, that the present centralized controls in the Parliament Buildings are the most effective approach in giving consistent treatment and stability to legislation. The decentralized method of handling individual cases on a regional basis gives latitude for the consideration of local conditions. There is now a better balance in the administration of cases as a result of the establishment of regional offices. The present fluid arrangement has proven to be more effective and less costly than the previous central management policy.

Progressive Research

Welfare services and needs are influenced by the economic health of the Province. There is an imminent use for far-reaching research into both administrative and social problems. Attention is now being focussed on exacting research projects. In the administrative field, studies will include operating problems, time studies to determine size of case-loads, and processing activities. Decision-making, with observation and experiment, will receive consideration. Despite the long experience acquired in the investigation of cases, and the necessary verification which must follow, it is probable that improved methods can be devised. Useful questions will surely arise which will give improved co-ordination in the visiting of cases and avoidance of much of the present inevitable duplication of services. All operating methods in the field and central office will ultimately be reviewed. Reasoning will follow the various steps in paper-work processing.

In a preliminary study of forms related to the economic tests, a small sample of cases shows some surprising details. To arrive at a decision in 6 blind cases chosen at random, the average time taken to render a decision as to eligibility was 39 days from the day the applications were received. This compared in the same number of cases with 80 days for Old Age Assistance; 72 days for Mothers' Allowances; and 50 days for Disabled Persons' Allowances.

The reasons for such delays all appear to be valid and involve proof of age, verification of employment, assets and income, and other common requirements in approval of cases. (All cases ultimately received their allowances on a retroactive basis.) The cases chosen were ones constantly in receipt of assistance for 42 months. An appalling number of items of information has been accumulated to become part of the case file.

The numerical analysis of basic and supplementary questions requested, through the forms used, averaged 720 for Old Age Assistance; 743 for Blind Persons' Allowances; 673 for Disabled Persons' Allowances; and 572 for Mothers' Allowances. This accumulation of entries and questions is a matter of wonderment and makes us pause to consider the need for such detailed information. Much study will be given to the elimination of many of these constant administrative particulars.

While existing programmes have expanded to provide for additional persons, we are now giving stability in types of aid available. The trend is towards refinement of policies, both in service and technical approach. We are seeking new knowledge through research and greater understanding of welfare measures as they relate to common conditions causing dependency. Breakdowns in the health of individuals and in family life are two significant sources of concern. A broader concept of the extraordinary social needs of the aged is necessary. The problems related to strengthening procedures in the care of children is ever present, as well as those necessary to remove dangers threatening them. Development of homemaking services is also projected. Foremost attention will be given to a study of cases at present in the care of municipalities. Efforts should be directed to absorbing the ones with long term and costly care. Without reference to priority these are some of the social surveys which would well serve the Province.

We can achieve greater efficiency in administrative operations by re-examination of essentials. Studies and surveys will be continuous. The unit charged with research will treat the projects independently and will be separate from the Branches and their functions. These exploratory measures should assure us that skills and standards are effective. Good babies can develop bad habits, and the worst of undesirable habits are those which relate to the failure to recognize them as such.

The Ageing

It has been stated that the first half of the century gave concentrated attention to the young person. To-day it is apparent that the latter half will be known as the "Era of Geriatrics". Geriatrics, as a specialized endeavour, is coming into its own and is now one of the most active in all the areas of human betterment. A greater understanding of the needs of the ageing is imperative.

Much useful effort is being given by the medical profession towards prevention of physical and mental deterioration. Rehabilitation and reactivation of older persons are meeting with spectacular success wherever undertaken. Research in geriatrics — a many-sided approach — is being financially underwritten by many authorities. Scientific developments, however, can only meet with failure when industry, government, and other employers (1) fail to employ persons beyond 50 years, and (2) retire them at 60 and 65 years.

Superannuation and pension plans, and a mistaken attitude that forced retirement will make positions with higher pay available for others, are at the root of the problem. Business frequently looks for younger employees and takes chances in releasing the experienced employee.

Unless the present trend is halted, a huge new reservoir of dependants — older persons — will be created. At all ages, the character of human society is determined by man's thinking, motivation, and behaviour. In effect, our society is declaring a moratorium on older persons which will have widespread evil effects. Because of arbitrary and mistaken rules preventing and denying persons the opportunity of working, the skill and experience of the older person are being lost. We are also creating large taxation problems, not to mention the obvious loss and frustration to the individual in his life's efforts to obtain happiness from his occupation. Idle men lose their own self-respect.

No nation can long afford, because of sheer costs of supporting the idle, to continue the practice of providing for unlimited leisure. This truism, in effect, was made by Lord Beveridge. Forcing a person into retirement is anti-social and reacts against the national interest. It is defeating much of what science is striving to do by extending the life expectancy of our older population. The chronological age often bears little relationship to what many mentally alert older persons may be able to contribute in productive activity.

Alternatives must be found to prevent this unnatural retirement of older persons. Such include: (1) postponement of automatic retirement beyond 65 years of age; (2) establishment of a pool of capable "retired" persons for possible re-employment; (3) persuasion of industry and labour that age in itself should not be a barrier to continued employment; and (4) promotion in industry to retain in its labour force a balanced ratio of capable older workers.

Other measures are, of course, essential in the treatment of the whole problem. Stimulation of all interested segments of the community on behalf of the older person and his requirements is necessary. No one method in itself will serve. Security of the aged is not only related to maintenance, but is assuredly dependent on the values life holds for them. The approach being made in the City of Windsor through its "Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation" is one example where better prospects are in store for the aged. Their activities will be watched with great interest. This voluntary group is being organized to give well-rounded treatment to the varying conditions which harass the aged. It has the necessary elements to give hope and comfort.

George Bernard Shaw, who himself lived to a ripe old age, once said: "Youth — such a wonderful thing. What a pity to waste it on young people".

Assistance for Elderly Persons

Maximum benefits were granted to each case within the terms of the Old Age Assistance legislation. Sponsored by the Government of Canada, the eligibility of applicants is a confining one. At some future time the basis of paying an average monthly allowance will surely have to be replaced by a budgetary allowance.

Ontario, among all Provinces, had the lowest ratio of cases qualifying for aid, with a little better than 1 in 8 of those in the 65-69 age range receiving the grant. In these prosperous times income and resources of almost all those in this age bracket made application unnecessary. New cases during the year numbered 7,639. Of these 1,033 were unmarried persons. Females predominate, with 44% being males.

A most progressive and dynamic Homes for the Aged programme has been underway throughout Ontario, providing proper care for those who require the maximum in maintenance. To date the capital expenditures have been $18,037,731 with the Provincial share being $9,111,714. The trend has been progressively toward bed care and provision for senile persons. In embarking on this very large programme it was realized private nursing homes could never properly accommodate the number requiring this type of attention. Hospitals are relieved of patients utilizing beds which should be reserved for acutely ill and urgent cases.

The preparations and plans for the present and future show foresight on the part of the participating municipalities. While it is almost certain that enough beds are unlikely to be available in the future, the developments to date give assurance that those accepted for care will finish their days in relative comfort.

Homes for the Aged are not considered to be the ultimate and only provision for the aged, but they are considered to be an important feature of providing accommodation for those who cannot live in the community. Residents live in cheerful surroundings with maximum attention to all phases of their happiness and comfort in their declining years. Many contribute towards their own maintenance from their own resources — mainly from assistance or security grants. Exemption is allowed, in varying amounts, by the authorities to each individual for purchases of personal incidentals.

This is an expanding programme which is being subjected to progressive refining process. Staffing, both in quality and quantity, is under constant review by the Boards of Management. The Branch of the Department concerned is rendering outstanding service in an advisory capacity directed to constant improvements. The Branch provides a consultant in Geriatrics in the medical care of residents. An architectural consultant is available to assess suitable and economical construction of new buildings and to give final approval to the projects.

The estimate for both the Homes for the Aged, operated under public auspices, and Charitable Institutions, operated by private organizations, is estimated to be almost $7,000,000 in 1956-1957 and will include both capital and maintenance costs. This amount does not include the operation of children's charitable institutions. This most urgent welfare problem is being treated in a rapid fashion. The total expenditures for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1943, for all institutional care was only $92,380.

Every evidence points to a private home care plan being a suitable alternative to actual care in a Home for the Aged. It is becoming more certain that the finding of suitable private homes will adequately provide for an increasing number of persons who would normally expect accommodation in an institutional setting.

Many municipalities are now extending themselves in this plan of substitute care. Approved homes, following inspection by the home authority, are being found and arrangements completed in accepting individual persons, with not more than six to be accommodated in each. Assurance is given that when persons are found to be unsuitable for continued care in the private home, the proprietor will be relieved of responsibility, and the person transferred to the Home for the Aged.

The person, whether accommodated in the Home or under private auspices, is assured of continuity of care.

Recognizing the urgent need for all possible accommodation, every encouragement and stimulation are being given to the many fine charitable institutions already skilled in providing care to aged persons. Commencing in 1951 financial aid has been available to these organizations, with the result that almost 1,000 new beds have been added to existing facilities.

Within reasonable limits the Act gives the organizations latitude in the operation of their homes. There is, indeed, a variety of types of care available, but all contribute to specific needs in relieving distress and assuring suitable attention to individuals.

An extension of grants for both capital construction and for maintenance of the residents will give greater incentive to these organizations. In construction activities it is anticipated that 50% of the costs will be underwritten by the Government. Where existing buildings have been acquired, approval may be given for a grant of $750 per bed. The Province is also proposing a 25% increase in maintenance grants.

The heavy expenditures directed to private organizations are (for construction) justified. While the Province is providing funds equal to public organizations, the acute shortage of beds can only be met by heavy provincial subsidization.

The standards of the homes are improving, and can be accepted as most adequate in fulfilling their obligations to the public. Several homes are most advanced in the services they render, and they are accomplishing much in introducing new concepts of care.

The plan of providing housing accommodation for elderly couples, under The Elderly Persons' Housing Aid Act, is proving to be a very acceptable measure. Some 9 municipalities have now collectively constructed 398 housing units. The long term financial arrangement offered by the Federal Authority is one of the most favourable aspects in encouraging the establishment of special housing for older people. The Province, in meeting the cost up to $500.00 a unit on the basis of an outright grant, has given stimulation to the projects.

Suitable housing for the elderly gives security and happiness to those who are faced with extraordinary problems. It gives independence in living arrangements, and makes possible community residence for the couples in the same manner as other citizens.

Every encouragement is being advanced in the continuance of this fine and basic form of aid. In passing, it should be stated that this legislation is now receiving the active consideration of United States Governmental authorities.

The Family

Mothers' Allowances are paid by the Province to a mother on behalf of children in her care under the age of 18 years. Stability of the family is usually assured through these benefits. The average monthly payment to a family was $82.56 in December, 1955. This amount includes the basic allowance, special assistance, and fuel allowance for the winter months. Families are permitted, in addition, to have certain income and earnings, and contributions from relatives and friends.

In consulting the records it is notable that 12% of the cases withdrawing from benefits did so because of re-marriage. The last year saw 1,840 new or reinstated cases added to the rolls with a total of 4,255 children.

Assistance is progressively being rendered to additional types of cases. There has been a constant liberalization of eligibility factors. This is essentially a children's programme, and accordingly in the cases accepted for benefits, emphasis is placed on the welfare of the children.

Generous treatment in meeting maintenance needs of families is given. Mothers, who may properly do so, are encouraged to accept employment. The children of these beneficiaries are mainly fatherless either as a result of death or desertion; while some are deprived of a "bread-winning father" because of extreme physical or mental incapacity. This Ontario legislation is broad in concept and treatment.

The deserted mother with children is one of the major types of care that are worrisome in their treatment. About 10% of all cases on the rolls are in this category and present problems from administrative and social points of view. Special efforts are made to find the absconding husbands and, aside from the difficulties in locating them, later adjustments between man and wife frequently remain unsolved. The Branch is, however, meeting with some success in finding these men and, frequently, favourable agreements are reached which benefit the family.

Special recognition is being given to these families, when the husband is located, in the form of a further three months' grant while settlement of the case is under review. The period of absence from the home, with whereabouts of the husband unknown, has now been reduced to six months from the previous period of one year. The unmarried mother will soon be recognized on a conditional basis, and thus relieve Children's Aid Societies of care in some cases.

Needy families or persons continue to receive assistance without delay through the auspices of Ontario's municipalities. Emergency situations are inescapable and the local authorities are prompt in determining eligibility. Temporary aid is frequently granted to cases during the period their applications are being considered for other forms of aid. Unemployment relief assistance in these and other cases forms an indispensable service at the community level.

Families number about one-third of municipal case-loads with individual persons comprising the balance. Two-thirds of the cases are females. The majority of persons qualifying under The Unemployment Relief Act are those who are ineligible for the special forms of public assistance including Mothers' Allowances, Old Age Assistance, or Disabled Persons' Allowances. Very few of the cases are amenable to rehabilitation measures. Ill health and other conditions of dependency are the main cause of lack of income or resources. Many relief recipients receive aid irregularly, but are frequently borderline employable cases under the best of circumstances.

Relief cases in recent years have been removed from the rolls of municipalities in large numbers because of the expansion of services by senior governments. An increasing number of families qualify for Provincial Mothers' Allowances benefits on a continuing basis.

The majority of municipalities are not hesitant in recognizing the needs of applicants and rendering necessary aid. While the costs are shared equally with the Province, they perform a service which can be best treated by them.

Children

There has been a consistent and constant recognition of the needs and rights of children. The first Act respecting children was passed in 1799, and provided for the education and support of orphans. Since that time development in child welfare legislation has been continuous.

Ontario early adopted the system of delegating authority to private agencies — Children's Aid Societies. These organizations have ministered to the needs of children in their many areas with funds being provided from provincial, municipal and private sources. From the establishment of the first Society under An Act for the Prevention of Cruelty to, and Better Protection of Children in 1893, the services for children and the Societies administering the legislation have been progressively strengthened. The most recent measure adopted by the Province to consolidate child welfare legislation was passed in 1954, and became effective on January 1, 1955. This was The Child Welfare Act, 1954.

The major functions of Children's Aid Societies relate to the protection, adoption and maintenance of children placed in their care by the Courts of Ontario. Especially in recent years, more concentrated efforts are being directed towards placing as many children as possible in adoption homes, as well as the development of better preventative services for the protection of children within their own homes.

The operations of the earliest Societies were largely supported through private philanthropy. The recent trend, of course, is towards public philanthropy. Financial support of the work of Children's Aid Societies through municipal and provincial revenues is now approximately 80%, with about 20 cents in each child welfare dollar being provided by private sources.

Constant refinements have been made in the legislation, in administrative policies and practices, and in the concepts of child care. A particularly encouraging factor has been noted in recent years in the growing emphasis being placed on promoting adoptions of older children. This, together with an even greater concentration on preventative measures, will provide for more security for the children of the province who require these specialized services.

For some children institutional care is necessary. Children's institutions have contributed greatly to the education of children and their preparation for life in the community as mature adults. They have an indispensable function to fulfil in the care and treatment of emotionally disturbed children, and with those who present difficult behaviour problems. Considerable success has been achieved by many of these institutions in helping children towards happier and more well-adjusted lives. The majority of the children's institutions are operated by religious and fraternal organizations. It is probable that there is a shortage of several types of children's institutions in Ontario.

Receiving Homes operated by Children's Aid Societies are assuming a more important role today in providing for care on a short-term basis. They bridge the gap between removal of a child from his home setting for placement elsewhere. In this adjustment period, emphasis is placed upon determining the emotional stability of the children. Other studies are carefully made in order to plan for their best possible future care.

Ontario is one of the few authorities on this continent to sponsor Day Nurseries. The Province is maintaining an excellent programme with proper standards for pre-school training and care. The Province assumes responsibility for the licensing of Day Nurseries, with approval and renewal of licences being necessary each year. The public Day Nurseries, in which the Province meets half of the costs of operations, are continuing to provide a suitable programme for the children of working mothers.

The Handicapped

The freshest approach in welfare measures in recent years, is the concentration which has been placed on the needs of handicapped or disabled persons. Recognition is being given to these groups, in their own right, and the services being made available for their benefit are gaining momentum.

The Disabled Persons' Allowances Act primarily provides an allowance to assist in the maintenance of those who, normally, could never become suitable candidates for rehabilitation leading to employment. These cases are carefully examined and screened to ensure that those who are accepted for these allowances can best be served through financial assistance.

In the $3\frac{1}{2}$ years this programme has been in operation, some 17,000 cases have applied for an allowance. The number of persons who have qualified for and received allowances during that period has amounted to 9,924, or 58% of the cases reviewed. The mere fact that applications were submitted for review has been of advantage and service to a very large number of persons, even though it was not possible to grant allowances in 42% of the cases. The need of some persons for medical treatment and services has been brought to the attention of the physicians who have made the necessary medical examinations in connection with their applications. The thorough review of medical evidence by our Medical Advisory Board has also been of value, in that recommendations have been made in certain cases leading to further medical investigation, as well as hospitalization and treatment where required.

This detailed examination of the medical records of cases has also led to a better understanding of the causes of disablement, and has stimulated the whole process of medical treatment for some persons whose conditions had remained static for long periods. Numbers of persons have been referred for the expert assessment available in hospitals, mental health and chest clinics, and other treatment centres. The practice of medicine has taught physicians and surgeons to take a positive view towards the ultimate recovery of their patients and the lessening of the effects of disablement wherever that possibility exists. An untold number of applicants for Disabled Persons' Allowances, whether eligible or ineligible for this form of assistance, have benefited from this process of medical assessment of their cases.

Everywhere today, rehabilitation services in one form or another are being advanced for the benefit of handicapped persons and designed to act as an alternative to the continuous payment of public funds for maintenance. Rehabilitation services are now formally recognized under the provisions of The Rehabilitation Services Act, 1955. We are looking forward to an expansion of this programme on behalf of handicapped persons. All interlocking services which come under the various welfare programmes will be related to this field of activity. Selected staff members will be engaged in the several direct and indirect services leading to the treatment, training and ultimate placement of handicapped persons accepted under the rehabilitation programme. All field staff members, who have any direct relationship with our welfare recipients, will be approaching their cases from a rehabilitation point of view, and will be making referrals of the likely prospects. Rehabilitation is a process which will give handicapped persons the opportunities and advantages which could otherwise not be made available. The programme to be developed is suitably related, in its administrative functions, with the work of the Disabled Persons' Allowances Branch.

Blind persons in Ontario benefit greatly through the specialized services of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. This outstanding organization makes every possible service available to the blind to ameliorate that condition, to educate and train, and to provide measures of adjustment leading to a full and happy life.

In the public field, an allowance is granted to eligible blind persons under the federal-provincial programme designed for their benefit. In these cases a much wider scope is given in the total amounts of income permitted under the legislation. Surgical treatment is also available to restore sight where possible.

Conclusion

In reviewing some highlights of the many welfare programmes which are maintained by governmental revenues, it may be observed that all have largely come into being during the past quarter century. Most of our welfare recipients are not and will not likely be available for the labour market. Such persons readily qualify for public financial support.

The welfare services which reach into the lives of many persons, have been evolutionary. The process of developing social measures beyond those now available is largely a matter of theory and practice. It is not so long ago when persons in need had to depend upon outright charity and almsgiving. Begging, child labour and unwholesome employment conditions prevailed and — pawnbrokers flourished in their business. These hazardous ways of treating distress have gradually disappeared with the development of public welfare programmes. An interesting commentary on this whole process is made by noting that the establishments which prominently displayed the "three brass balls" are largely non-existent today. Only in the very large centres do they exist, and even there they are few in number.

The Department of Public Welfare is a province-wide, self-contained operating unit. It is responsible to the Legislature and Government serving the citizens of Ontario. The activities of this organization are reflected to a large degree in the staff employed to perform their duties as civil servants.

Ours is a capable and conscientious staff treating their varied obligations with willingness and intelligence. I am grateful for their loyalty and resourcefulness in meeting common problems. I would particularly like to recognize the invaluable group of senior officials, including our two Executive Officers, and the responsible men and women who so amply perform within each programme.

The Welfare Administrators, and others engaged in the municipal field, have been particularly helpful in the performance of services of mutual concern. The private organizations have co-operated fully in rendering all possible encouragement in designing legislation and services in the interest of those eligible for assistance.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES S. BAND, Deputy Minister.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES BRANCH

· · · · · · Director's Report

During the first nine months of the past year, disabled persons continued to receive their allowances through the programme originally designed for them by the Province of Ontario. In presenting this third annual report of the Disabled Persons' Allowances Branch, it should be noted that on January 1, 1955, the provincial programme was replaced by a federal-provincial scheme which commenced to be administered in accordance with the Disabled Persons Act (Canada) and its regulations. Enabling legislation was passed by the Province to give effect to the joint plan.

It was necessary for the Branch to re-examine the qualifications of all persons receiving allowances under the provincial Act to determine whether there would be continuing eligibility for assistance under the new legislation. Although this was a major task, it was completed without any interruption in payment of allowances to those persons who continued to qualify. Following the transfer of cases from the provincial to the federal-provincial plan, a total of 6,399 persons received allowances in January, 1955, the first month of operation under the new programme.

In many respects, the experience of Ontario in administering Disabled Persons' Allowances was used as a basis for the development of this type of welfare assistance throughout Canada. However, with the introduction of the federal-provincial scheme in this Province, there were a number of significant changes in eligibility requirements, and in the assessment of income and assets. In Table XI, appended to this report, will be found a summary of the differences between the two programmes.

To review briefly the activities of the Branch, we should note that on April 1, 1954, there were 5,554 disabled persons receiving allowances; 1,863 new cases were accepted during the year, and an additional 121 persons had their allowances reinstated. With 231 deaths occurring, 246 persons being transferred to Old Age Assistance, and 438 cases being suspended for various reasons of non-eligibility, the number of recipients at the close of the fiscal period (March 31, 1955) was 6,623. Our caseload was therefore increased by 1,069 persons, or by about 20%. The total provincial expenditure for allowances was $2,560,238, while an additional amount of $77,192 was expended for the medical services made available to all recipients through an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association.

Statistical Summary

From the statistical tables which follow this report, certain data have been selected here as being noteworthy.

- (1) The number of new applications received during the year under review amounted to 3,417. Of this number, 1,863 persons, or 54%, were granted allowances; 1,467, or 43%, were found to be ineligible; and 87, or 3%, either withdrew their applications or were deceased before the disposition of their cases.
- (2) The distribution of the new recipients according to the major types of disabilities is as follows:
 - (a) 583, or approximately one-third (31%), were suffering from mental disabilities;
 - (b) 368, or one-fifth (20%), were found to be totally and permanently disabled due to severe heart conditions;
 - (c) 292 persons (16%) were classified under various paralytic disabilities:
 - (d) 172 cases, or approximately 10%, were severely disabled due to arthritis; the remainder, consisting of
 - (e) 448 persons (23%), were recorded under other types of disabilities such as neurological conditions, epilepsy, deformities, tumors, chest conditions and others.
- (3) A further significant feature is revealed by the fact that 330 of the new recipients, or 18%, were receiving direct relief assistance prior to the granting of Disabled Persons' Allowances; while 1,533 persons, or 82%, commenced to receive public assistance for the first time.
- (4) The distribution of the new cases according to their age ranges may be summarized as follows:
 - (a) 359 recipients (19.2%) were in the age range 18-24 years;
 - (b) 252, or 13.6%, were from 25 to 34 years of age;
 - (c) 230, or 12.3%, were 35-44 years of age;
 - (d) 302, or 16.2%, were 45-54; and
 - (e) 720, or 38.7%, and thus over a third of the total, came in the age range 55-64 years.
- (5) A survey of the cases which did not qualify for the allowance shows that 1,126 applicants, or 77%, were not regarded as being totally and permanently disabled; while the remainder, 341 persons (23%), were ineligible for various other reasons.

Conclusion

During this fiscal year we have seen the conclusion of activities under the provincial programme which was first introduced in Ontario on July 1, 1952. We have seen the Ontario programme lead to the development of the federal-provincial scheme, through which disabled persons in the other provinces may now receive this form of assistance. It has become increasingly evident throughout the two years and nine months Disabled Persons' Allowances have been in effect in this province that this social welfare measure has been achieving its intended goals. The programme has served to close one of the major gaps in our social services; it has relieved some of the pressure upon hospitals and other institutions by making it possible for many disabled persons to remain and receive care and attention in their own homes; and it has made available necessary assistance to a group of persons who, throughout their lives, will be unable to provide for themselves.

THE MAIN DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE ONTARIO PROCRAMME FOR DISABLED PERSONS AND THE FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL PROCRAMME

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES BRANCH

· · · · · · · Director's Rep

Mothers' Allowances continue to play a major role in the ever broadening field of social welfare. This is evidenced by the fact that during the fiscal year, 2730 mothers made application for this particular form of assistance, an increase of 16% over the previous year.

Because of the obvious need for Mothers' Allowances, and because of changing social and economic conditions, legislation of this type requires constant revision. During the 1955 session of the Ontario Legislature, important amendments to the Mothers' Allowances Act were enacted.

It is difficult at this time to assess how these amendments may affect the case load, but the fact remains that the provisions of the Act have been broadened, thus permitting a greater number of mothers to qualify for assistance.

Residence

The residence clause of the Mothers' Allowances Act prior to the new amendment of 1955 required that a mother be resident in the Province of Ontario for one year prior to making application for assistance. This residence requirement has been considered the most lenient in the Dominion. Experience, however, has shown that the clause was restrictive in its application. Many lifelong residents of the Province could not become eligible as they had broken residence during the one year period. With the introduction of the new residence clause, this situation is corrected and temporary residence outside the Province during the one year period, for compassionate or other reasons, will not disqualify an applicant.

Desertion

Cases presenting the most serious social problems are those under the Desertion clause of the Mothers' Allowances Act. The taxpayers of the Province are called upon to maintain mothers and children left dependent as a result of the desertion of the husband and father. The mother finds herself in the majority of cases destitute and, at the same time, faces the responsibility of providing care and maintenance for her children. All too frequently little or no effort has been made to apprehend the deserting man, and the continuation of this condition could encourage an increase in such cases. In the twelve month period covered by this report 289 mothers made application for assistance under the Desertion clause of the Mothers' Allowances Act.

The Branch, with the cooperation of the local and Provincial Police Departments, has been able, in a great number of cases, to locate the deserting man, thus giving the local officials an opportunity to have the man apprehended and arrange for the future maintenance of his family. In many instances, the Branch has, through the Field Staff, been instrumental in re-establishing the family without the necessity of the case going before the Courts. When the man is located in another jurisdiction, the local authorities have been faced with two problems, namely, to apprehend the man and to provide maintenance for the mother and family as a result of the discontinuance of Mothers' Allowances.

The most recent amendment to the Mothers' Allowances Act does, in a measure, overcome this problem in allowing the Director to continue benefits for a period of not more than three months after the man is located.

The Province during the past year, through the medium of the Mothers' Allowances Act, has paid $708,533 to deserted mothers, representing 10.8% of the total Mothers' Allowances expenditures for the year.

Rehabilitation

Not to be considered least among the amendments to the Mothers' Allowances Act is the provision to include permanently unemployable husbands of beneficiaries who may be eligible under the newly enacted Rehabilitation Service Act of 1955. The services afforded by this new legislation will be extended to the 1,641 fathers whose families are in receipt of Mothers' Allowances, and it is to be hoped that many of the permanently unemployable husbands will avail themselves of the opportunity thus extended.

This entirely new legislation will undoubtedly benefit many of the families receiving assistance under the provisions of the Mothers' Allowances Act and will enable the husband again to assume employment. The Field Workers throughout the Province will play an important part in bringing to the attention of the Branch those cases which might respond to rehabilitation measures.

General

The number of beneficiaries on the payroll, including foster mothers, at the end of March 1955, totalled 7,294; this compared to 7,059 in March of the preceding year and indicates an increase of 3.33%. The increase can be attributed to the fact that a greater number of cases required assistance as a result of the husband becoming permanently unemployable, tuberculosis being the principal cause of incapacitation. The various other classifications including widows, deserted and divorced mothers, and foster mothers showed little change over the previous year. This fact demonstrates that the Branch is serving a broad, stable area of need.

Only as a result of the united effort on the part of Municipal Welfare Administrators, Area Supervisors, Field Workers, local Childrens' Aid Societies and various other social agencies, has the success of this programme been possible. It is also fitting at this time to mention the members of the clerical staff of the Branch and the District Offices whose work behind the scenes enables the Branch to render an efficient and worthwhile service to the citizens of Ontario.

Old Age Assistance

The province continued to pay old age assistance up to a maximum of $40 a month during the fiscal year 1954-55 to persons in the 65 - 69 year age group, under an agreement with the federal government. The agreement has been in force since January 1, 1952, without change.

As was noted in the previous report, a meeting of the Advisory Board was held in Ottawa in January 1954, to consider changes in the federal regulations. A second meeting of the Advisory Board was held in September 1954 with the result that the federal regulations were revised effective January 1, 1955. An amending agreement was drawn up between Ontario and Canada to conform with the federal revised regulations. However, the amending agreement was not signed at March 31, 1955.

Expenditures for old age assistance during 1954-55 increased by $287,836 over the previous year, the payments amounting to $9,784,732 for the year. The payments were made to an average of 21,848 persons a month, an increase of 810 persons a month over the previous year when an average of 21,038 persons received assistance. The number of recipients at March 31, 1955, was 22,061. This was an increase of 2.2% over the number of recipients at March 31, 1954, namely 21,587, and represented 13.6% of the population in the 65 - 69 year age group in the Province. The national average showed approximately 21% of the population in this age group receiving old age assistance. As in the previous year, 78% of the recipients received the maximum payment of $40 a month. The average payment during the month of March for all recipients was $36.86.

The number of persons applying for old age assistance during the year was 8,119, an increase of 1.7% over the previous year. A total of 7,029 applications were approved for payment, and of these approximately 52% of the applicants were granted assistance at age 65. The balance were fairly evenly distributed between the ages of 66 and 69. Of the applicants granted assistance 44% were males and 56% females; 43% were married and living with their spouses, and 57% were classed as single. Almost two out of every three persons to whom assistance was granted lived in their own home or in the home of a child or other relative, the remainder living in rented accommodations or in public or private institutions. Approximately 39% of the recipients had no real or personal property whatsoever.

Blind Persons' Allowances

Allowances to blind persons continued to be paid up to a maximum of $40 a month under an agreement between the Province and Canada. The present agreement has been in force since January 1, 1952, and, as in the case of old age assistance, there have been no changes in the agreement up to the present time. The regulations under the federal Blind Persons Act were revised effective January 1, 1955, but at March 31, 1955, the joint federal-provincial agreement had not been amended accordingly.

At the beginning of the fiscal year 1,710 persons were in receipt of a blind allowance, whereas at the end of the year the number of recipients was 1,731, an increase of 1.2%. The total amount paid out in allowances during the year was $813,076, showing a moderate increase of $8,230 over the previous year. Of the 1,731 persons receiving the allowance at the year end, 90% were receiving the maximum payment of $40 a month. The average payment during the month of March for all recipients was $38.73.

A total of 339 applications were processed during the year and 235 were approved for payment, while 104 applications were declined or otherwise closed. Of the 235 persons granted the allowance there was an almost even distribution between males (49%) and females (51%); 40% were married and living with their spouses, and 60% were classed as single. Three out of every five persons were living in their own home or in the home of a child or other relative, the remainder living in rented accommodations or in public or private institutions. Approximately 48% of the recipients had no real or personal property whatsoever.

Medical Care

Recipients of old age assistance and blind persons' allowances were also provided with free medical care under an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association. The plan covers that medical care which a doctor is able to provide in his office or in the patient's home, but does not include hospitalization. The medical care plan also covers those old age security pensioners who were previously in receipt of a pension under the former Old Age Pensions Act, those old age assistance recipients and blind persons' allowances recipients who are transferred to old age security at age 70, and those old age security pensioners who were not previously in receipt of a provincial allowance but who may qualify for free medical care upon application on the basis of need.

The cost of this medical care programme is borne entirely by the province, including the services provided to pensioners under the federal old age security programme. Payments amounting to $1,325,567 were made to the Ontario Medical Association during the fiscal year to cover the cost of medical services to recipients of old age assistance, blind persons' allowances and old age security pensioners. This expenditure was only slightly less than the $1,345,715 expended during the fiscal year 1953-54. This reduction is largely due to the increasing mortality rate of the old age security pensioners.

In addition to the medical care provided through the Ontario Medical Association, the Province has entered into an arrangement with Canada to provide remedial treatment for blindness to recipients of blind persons' allowances. The treatment provided under this plan is in most cases operation for the extraction of senile cataract, although certain other types of operation, such as corneal transplantation, may be performed to restore sight. The plan covers the cost of the operation, hospital and transportation costs and the provision of cataract glasses, and is shared with the federal government on a 75-25 basis with Ontario paying 25%.

A comparison of expenditures for medical care under the agreement with the Ontario Medical Association during the year 1954-55, with 1953-54, follows:

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF BRANC

· · · · · · · Director's Rep

During the fiscal year 1954-1955 assistance was provided to persons in necessitous circumstances requiring aid under the provisions of The Unemployment Relief Act.

In municipalities assistance is administered by municipal officials, the Province sharing with the municipalities 50% of the expenditures, which include food, fuel, clothing, shelter, household sundries and physicians' services.

In unorganized areas assistance is administered by Provincial District Welfare Administrators, such aid being paid fully by the Province.

Medical

Persons in receipt of Unemployment Relief Assistance are entitled to receive free medical aid from the doctor of their own choice, either in their own homes or in the doctor's office.

Accounts

There are 930 organized municipalities in the Province of Ontario and of these 839 or 90.2% rendered accounts under The Unemployment Relief Act for the year under review. Of the 29 cities all submitted accounts. Out of 310 towns and villages 275 submitted claims or 88.7%. Of 591 townships, 535 submitted claims or 90.5%.

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1955 was $6,254,709, the Province contributing $3,338,428, the municipalities paying $2,916,281. The increase in gross expenditures over the preceding year was 18.7%.

Age Group 65 — 70 and Over

During the month of March 1955, 25,815 persons received assistance. Of these there were 484 persons between the ages of 65 and 69, whereas in March 1954 there were 459 persons. In the age group 70 years and over there were 132 persons against 156 in March 1954. This latter group were not eligible for Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security mainly due to residence.

Supplementary Assistance

Where there are extenuating circumstances an amount up to a maximum of $10.00 per month is granted to persons in receipt of Old Age Assistance, Old Age Security, or Disabled Persons' Allowances as a relief measure in conjunction with municipalities.

This programme has increased the cost of Direct Relief in the year under review and has been of considerable assistance to persons requiring supplementary aid.

Incapacitation Allowances

A maximum of $50.00 per month plus medical services is granted to persons coming within this category. Periodic transfers are made where applicable to Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance, or Old Age Security.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms, legs, and braces have been supplied to persons requiring them, the cost to municipalities being shared on a 50-50 basis, with the Province paying the full cost in unorganized areas. There has been a considerable saving of public funds by the providing of these appliances which enables the person, where possible, to become self-sustaining or to assist in home duties.

Rehabilitation

Following the supplying of needed Prosthetic appliances or where a course is beneficial the person has been granted a rehabilitation course to fit him for employment.

Education courses have been processed through the Provincial Education Department or where not applicable under the provisions of The Unemployment Relief Act.

Persons in receipt of Disabled Persons' Allowances and where rehabilitation is considered beneficial, are referred to this branch and course provided. In all cases maintenance is provided under The Unemployment Relief Act

Follow-up is made by representatives of this branch with the view to the person receiving employment. Our files show that success has resulted from this programme in providing persons with gainful occupation, whereas otherwise they would be continually in receipt of social assistance.

Desertions

As in the past, and especially in this year under review, constant attention has been given to the matter of desertion of the head of the family. With the co-operation of the municipal officials and Provincial Police, every effort has been made to apprehend the absconding person, with the result a considerable number has been located. Reconciliations have been effected or court action followed through, thereby reducing the number of persons receiving relief assistance.

Transportation

Financial assistance covering transportation costs has been paid to municipalities where the head of a family has been returned to his place of residence.

Inter-provincial transportation costs have also been shared with the municipalities in returning a person or family to other provinces where they have residence following negotiations with other provinces. A considerable number of cases come within this category during each year.

Economic Report

Reports of inestimable value are received quarterly from the District Administrators and Supervisors showing the various economic trends in the Province.

Employables

Additional unconditional grants by the Province were made available in March 1955 to the municipalities by a grant in aid to the amount of $3,750,000 to be used for assistance to unemployed employables.

This aid was of immeasurable value to the municipalities and at a time when the need was apparent and the promptness in forwarding grants enabled them to render immediate assistance.

General Welfare Requests

This branch reviews numerous requests from municipalities, other Provinces, Welfare Agencies and other departments of the Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to welfare. Prompt attention is given by our District Welfare Administrators and Supervisors to all referrals made to them.

The co-operation of the municipal officials is gratefully acknowledged and appreciated for their efforts and assistance in the granting of aid to persons in necessitous circumstances.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

· · · · · Director's Report

The Homes for the Aged Act, 1949, on becoming legislation, started the trend to the modern, bright and cheerful homes for elderly people who, for one reason or another, have no homes of their own. The municipalities under this Act are reimbursed to the extent of 50% of the costs of: 1. erection of new building. 2. equipment and furnishings, and 3. maintenance of the homes. The Homes for the Aged Branch, in addition, places at the disposal of the municipalities concerned its accumulated knowledge and experience, gathered from statistics and other sources, which is of value in carrying out this programme.

In the designing of the Homes consideration has to be given to the increasing need for specialized and segregated care of those who are bedridden and senile. Emphasis is accordingly given each year to providing in the new Homes a larger proportion of segregated space for the care of these two types of residents. By this means future needs are anticipated when new construction is contemplated and, as far as possible, expensive alterations are avoided at a future date. Additions are also being made to the older Homes to provide this care.

Three hundred and forty-six new beds have been added to the municipally-operated homes which represents an increase of 7.8% over the previous year.

Growth of Bed Care

Prior to the passing of the Act in 1949, bed patients could not be accepted into the Homes because no facilities were available for such care. Alterations in the older Homes and special provision in the new Homes are now providing accommodation for bed patients at an increasing rate. Available accommodation for 459 bed patients in 1953 was increased by 55.8% to 715 in 1954.

Three advantages result from providing Bed Care. Firstly, bedridden elderly people are given the best of care by qualified personnel in dealing with this type of patient. Secondly, this expert care, in some cases, means re-activation of the patient and a return to ambulation. Thirdly, Bed Care frees the hospitals of patients who do not need the full and costly services which a hospital is designed to provide.

Special Care

Mental troubles and senility frequently appear with advancing years. Many such people do not require treatment in a Mental Hospital but do require extraordinary care. The new Homes, with segregated accommodation, not only provide this needed care but, at the same time, retain normal care residents within their own group.

Married Couples

The Older Homes found it necessary to separate married couples in their declining years because no accommodation existed for them to live together. To-day, all the newer Homes, and a number of the modernized older Homes, provide adequate accommodation for married couples.

The increased accommodation provided for Bed Care and Special Care is being more fully utilized than the accommodation provided for Normal Care. At the end of 1954, 86.0% of the accommodation provided for Bed Care was occupied and 92.0% of the accommodation provided for Special Care was also, whereas only 82.2% of the Normal Care accommodation was occupied. These figures would appear to prove the increasing need for Bed and Special Care and, also, that the guidance offered the municipalities by the Branch in this respect is justified.

The Charitable Institutions Act

The Charitable Institutions Act is designed to encourage participation of religious, fraternal, and other private organizations in dealing with the problems of the elderly.

During the year this excellent work was further encouraged by increasing the grant of $1,000 to $2,000 per bed for new construction. The payment of 20c per day per resident towards the cost of maintaining the resident was continued. Also continued was the advice of the Branch with regard to the design of new buildings and the latest thinking and expert knowledge in dealing with the problems of the elderly.

The Elderly Persons Housing Aid Act

A number of municipalities has been interested in this Act, passed in 1952. Under its terms, the Minister of Public Welfare may grant aid to any limited dividend housing corporation which has been incorporated by or on behalf of a municipality, or has been approved by a municipality, or that has had a loan made to it under "The National Housing Act, 1944 (Canada)" to assist it in any project for the construction and equipment of low rental housing units for elderly persons. The amount of such grant is $500 per dwelling unit or fifty per cent of the capital cost of the project exclusive of that part of the capital cost that is financed by a National Housing loan, whichever is the lesser.

It will be noted in Table VI that 288 new dwelling units have been constructed as a result of this legislation; that 110 dwelling units are under construction; and, that a further 144 dwelling units are in the planning stage — a total of 542 units.

It is expected that this legislation will continue to encourage activity with regard to this needed low rental housing for elderly persons.

Director's Report

Children's Aid Societies

The Child Welfare Act, 1954, consolidating The Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and The Adoption Act, was proclaimed January 1st, 1955.

Among the numerous changes made were the extension of the definition of neglect to include emotional neglect; the reduction of the termination age for permanent wardship from 21 to 18 years; the limitation to 24 months at any one time of the total period during which a child might be committed or recommitted to the temporary care of a Children's Aid Society; the provision of grants to Children's Aid Societies for the extension of such services as would tend to reduce the number of children committed at public expense to the care of Children's Aid Societies; and the development of a formula for the uniform computation of maintenance rates.

During the latter part of the period the number of Children's Aid Societies charged with the administration of the new Act was raised to 54 by the incorporation of the Catholic Children's Aid Society of Hamilton.

From 1939 to 1948, a period of war and price control followed by re-adjustment and inflation, the Ontario population under the age of 20 years increased by 15%, the proportion of that population receiving care in the Children's Aid Societies by 50%, and the staff services to each child by 30%. That the cost to the individual taxpayer appeared to triple and did in fact increase by 80%* is, in consequence, easily understood. However, from 1948 to 1954, although the population under the age of 20 years increased a further 37%, and staff services per child in the care of Societies 55%, the proportion of the population receiving services in the care of Societies fell again almost to the 1939 level.

It is not easy to understand then, why, in the face of this remarkable drop, costs appeared again to double and, to the individual taxpayer, did in fact again increase by some 50%. Although the costs of child welfare have risen greatly, there is evidence that, had the staff services not improved, the resulting child maintenance expenditures forced upon the municipalities would have driven total child welfare costs considerably higher.

When municipal costs are compared we find that, although child welfare costs are increasing, they do so at a lesser rate than health, education, or general municipal costs and that, since 1947, they represent a reducing proportion of total municipal expenditures.

Although there is evidence that services are improving, and that increasing expenditures are reflected in a reduction in the proportion of the children being taken into the care of Societies, greater service and cost control are essential if the objectives of the electorate are to be achieved.

Effective development in the following fields will aid in crystallizing the necessary control:

- (a) understanding and co-operation between provincial, municipal, and private welfare agencies,
- (b) staff training programmes,
- (c) services to children in their own homes, and
- (d) services to children in need of adoption.

Towards these ends, in part at least, The Child Welfare Act, 1954 will assist.

Institutional Services

The change in emphasis by organizations in the field of institutional care continued to be apparent throughout the past year.

The work of the Association of Children's Institutions, through its committees, workshops and annual meeting, helped its members to recognize more clearly the particular capacity of institutions to serve children with special needs.

The days provided in strictly shelter and custodial care continued to fall despite the rapidly increasing population. The average per diem cost continued to rise more rapidly than the cost of living although the total cost of operating itself decreased. These facts are themselves reflections of the change in emphasis from general shelter to specialized care.

During the year those organizations who evinced an interest in providing some form of institutional services for children carefully considered the most urgent community and children's special needs.

Those institutions which are proceeding towards designation under The Charitable Institutions Act have amongst their aims and objects the meeting of particular needs of children either with or without the provision of ordinary shelter care.

^{*} All figures used in this report based on a uniform dollar value set at the 1949 level.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

· · · · · Director's Report

At the end of eight years of operation of the Day Nurseries Act there are two hundred and fifty-five day nurseries, nursery schools and private kindergartens throughout the province. Of this number, 88% have been licensed, 4% are recent applications whose licences are pending, and 8% are operating below standard. It is gratifying to note the steady rise in the number of licensed nurseries and the widespread realization on the part of nursery staff and parents of the importance of achieving and maintaining a proper standard for the care and training of young children.

Before a licence can be obtained, it is necessary for the municipal Fire and Health Departments to inspect and approve the premises. In this way, municipal officials know the location of all nurseries and are able to visit at any time. They are then in a position to advise parents in the area as to where they may find suitable care for their children.

During the past year, the greatest increase in the number of nurseries has occurred in the nurseries offering all-day care, and in the programmes for five year old children in areas where there are no kindergartens in the public and separate schools. These kindergartens, operated by private individuals or by community groups, often prove to be the forerunner of the establishment of a kindergarten by the school board.

While approximately 40% of all nurseries in Ontario are located in York County, the rest are scattered throughout twenty-nine counties and seven districts. For instance, there are seven nurseries in Thunder Bay District. The supervisors of these nurseries meet regularly together to try to improve their standards and to plan so that they may each benefit as much as possible from the annual inspection visit from the Day Nurseries Branch. In many centres there is only one nursery and the inspection visit is the chief opportunity to keep in touch with new developments in the nursery field.

Nearly half the nurseries in Ontario are operating due to the initiative of private individuals who have undertaken to secure the necessary training. to find and equip suitable premises, and to assume the risks of private enterprise. Fifteen percent of the nurseries are operated by co-operative groups of parents who have joined together to secure the benefits of nursery experience for their young children. Such nurseries often utilize the services of the mothers to supplement those of the professional staff. In this way the mother also benefits by an increased understanding of her own and other children.

Another group of nurseries, nearly one-third of the total, are sponsored by private agencies. In some cases, as with private day nurseries operating under a board of community-minded citizens, the nursery is the chief activity of the agency. In many other cases, settlement houses, churches of all denominations, Y.W.C.A.'s or community centres operate a nursery as one of several services.

The number of nurseries receiving provincial municipal grants is now twenty-seven. In both Hamilton and Toronto, one day nursery receiving this grant was closed due to decreased enrolment of children of working mothers. The municipal kindergartens in Stouffville and Milton were taken over by the local boards of education.

Field supervisors of the Branch have been gratified by the co-operation they have received from local officials and from the administrators and staffs of nurseries. In many instances nurseries have voluntarily worked toward a better programme than that required as the minimum for licensing.

The Branch has been concerned from time to time at locating an unlicensed nursery giving sub-standard day care. It may happen that such a nursery may operate for weeks or months without the knowledge of local or provincial authorities. All persons interested in the welfare of young children should keep before parents the importance of investigating carefully before placing their children in day care, and asking to see the licence if more than three children are given day care. Many such nurseries have been located because parents have made careful enquiries as to the standard of care offered.

The citizens of Ontario may well be proud of a programme of supervision of nursery centres which is second to none on the continent. Through the authority of the Day Nurseries Act it has been possible to prevent and control conditions in which large numbers of children are simply given a custodial type of care without sufficient opportunity for play, for nourishing meals, or for proper rest.

Licensed nurseries in Ontario are offering programmes suited to the needs of healthy, active young children. They are assured of sufficient play space with safe and stimulating play equipment. In the all-day programme, the children have a safe, well-equipped play yard, where they may benefit from fresh air and exercise. Their noon-day meal is planned to train the child to accept and enjoy all varieties of wholesome food. A long afternoon nap assures that the child will be refreshed for the afternoon activities. Trained staff offer the child sympathetic guidance in his early attempts to live happily with other children. Parents are assured of understanding of their problems with their children. All in all, children in licensed day nurseries receive safe, interesting, and well-rounded instruction.

During the past eight years the percentage of licensed nurseries has climbed steadily from 45% during the first year of the licensing programme to 88% at the present time. These figures clearly demonstrate two important points. On the one hand, without licensing, many of the nurseries would be operating at a sub-standard level, and on the other hand, when a standard is set, child caring centres will strive to reach it.

During this period, three hundred nurseries were under the supervision of the Day Nurseries Branch. Fifty-seven nurseries opened during the year, and forty-five closed, leaving two hundred and fifty-five operating at the end of the period. Of these, two hundred and twenty-four were licensed, or 88%, compared with 83% and 86% in the two previous years.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

. Directors Report

A variety of services is rendered by the Field Workers in establishing eligibility of applicants for assistance from the Province. The field staff is required to treat all cases applying or receiving Old Age Assistance, Mothers' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Blind Persons' Allowances and Direct Relief. In addition, they serve a large number of Old Age Security cases and other persons not identified with a particular programme. In the year ending March 31st, 1955, 160,032 visits were made, compared with 139,565 for the previous year. These vital services increased by 20,467.

While the field staff handle individual cases, Welfare Supervisors and Administrators, in charge of the 17 regional offices, are personally responsible for the examination of relief accounts and, among other duties, direct a consultative service. These senior officers have much responsibility in the welfare functioning within their Districts and have, indeed, accomplished a great deal in the integration of services. They personally made 3,288 calls on the Municipalities during the year under review. The relationship between provincial and municipal officers has been of benefit to both authorities.

Field Services staff has consistently numbered approximately 155 persons. It is fluid in the exchange of workers within a region. Where vacancies exist in Districts because of illness, vacations or other reasons, it is usual to have another Field Worker deal with the more urgent cases.

The present decentralization of services to cases under a regional office is providing greater facility in the early submission of necessary forms and documents. Delays in processing cases throughout the Province have been greatly curtailed.

Refresher courses are now a part of the training scheme effective within the Department. New members of the staff are commencing their duties with much greater understanding of the service required of them. It should also be reported that the average case-load served by a Field Worker is 386 cases. Normally, one visit a year is paid to Old Age Assistance recipients, blind persons and disabled persons. Mothers' Allowances beneficiaries are usually visited each four months. Some other cases require more frequent visits.

The duties performed by Field Workers are numerous and for a variety of reason — illness, vacations, etc. — it is difficult to maintain, at all times, a full complement of staff. As a result, a constant substitution of field staff is required and where the services cannot be given locally, a number of Head Office Field Workers replace the absentees.

In conclusion, it should be stated that there exists a fine state of harmony between the members of the field staff and those who are charged with processing the cases in the Parliament Buildings.

PERSONNEL OFFICER'S REPORT

The Department of Public Welfare staff performs a great variety of services. Most of the employees are engaged in rendering direct service to cases. As a result some 160 serve the local areas from 17 District Offices.

These field workers and supervisors obtain all the primary and initial information required directly from applicants. They also maintain continued interest in them through periodic visits. The staff in the Parliament Buildings process this flow of work, determine eligibility, and prepare grants for monthly payment. Both the field and internal staff are directed by senior employees with supervisory and administrative responsibilities.

Direct Services within legislative acts and regulations are:

Old Age Assistance Blind Persons' Allowances Disabled Persons' Allowances Mothers' Allowances

In the judicial districts in addition to the above categories of aid, the five District Offices deal with persons applying for direct relief in unorganized areas.

Supervisory and consultative services together with financial assistance are rendered by other staff and function under the following Acts:

Charitable Institutions Child Welfare Day Nurseries Homes for the Aged Soldiers' Aid Unemployment Relief

All programmes utilized a staff of 421 employees on March 31, 1955, compared with 409 on March 31, 1954. Employment proved to be most stable with but a small turn-over. Only an average of five separations a month left the Department because of death, superannuation, marriage, dismissal, or other employment. Eighty new employees were engaged during the 12 month period.

Recruitment of capable staff has been a cause of concern because of expansion in industry and business. It has been found difficult to obtain satisfactory, experienced personnel for the 33 categories of job classification within the Department because of a market of short supply.

Machine processing of much of the detail relating to cases has made possible a largely reduced staff. Because of the complexity of welfare regulations and the speed with which payments must be made, it has required greater abilities in the services required of the staff.

An extensive training programme for both the field and clerical staff has been undertaken. On-the-job-training procedures which cover the diversified work of the Department are developing a more competent staff.

The standards of performance essential in carrying out field duties have risen. To obtain an assessment of the field staff's understanding of the work and ability in performing their duties, examinations were conducted for all field workers. These formal tests were conducted simultaneously in nine centres throughout the Province. This appraisal resulted in a replacement of certain members of the field staff and also served as a basis of recognition of particular knowledge and ability of others through higher salary classification.

Entry examinations are now standard procedure for applicants for positions in the Field Services Branch. This refinement of our employee selection process is proving successful in attracting and retaining hetter personnel. The policy of selective recruitment and training results in successful candidates being appointed as probationary field workers before being allocated to the field. Intensive in-service training and supervision are given. Responsibility is assumed for the important task of preparing employees with the necessary knowledge and skills to perform their duties adequately. The more careful classification of employees has made it possible, in co-operation with the Civil Service Commission, to recognize by salary increases the requisite abilities and responsibilities for which each member of the staff is charged.

OF ONTARIO

FISCAL YEAR 1954-1955

REPORT OF THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION OF ONTARIO

THE HON. LOUIS P. CECILE, Q.C. Minister of Welfare, Parliament Buildings,
TORONTO, Ontario.

Sir:

I have the honour to submit herewith the report of the operation of the Soldiers' Aid Commission for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1955.

The auditor's statement will be found as Appendix "A".

With the exception of the Kathleen Hammond Fund, which is dealt with separately in this report, the funds at the disposal of the Commission are limited. Consequently, to adequately discharge the responsibility assigned to them, the Commissioners have sought and secured the co-operation of other organizations. The assistance of the Red Cross, Poppy Fund and Paraplegic Association has enabled the Commission to supply dentures, dental treatment, wheel chairs and clothing without undue strain on its funds.

By the co-operation of the Army, Navy and Air Force Benevolent Funds we have been able to effect maximum assistance in settling emergent debts that were causing distress at a minimum cost to the Commission. Members of the medical and dental professions, and most hospital and municipal authorities, have aided materially in accepting reduced amounts in full settlement of accounts. When all these factors are grouped, the Commission has, itself, or by participation with other groups, effected settlement of accounts totalling $34,586 at a cost of $3,311 to the Commission, during the year under consideration.

Additional savings have been possible by the Commission itself purchasing, on behalf of the ex-service personnel concerned, such items at clothing, bedding, furniture, school books, hearing aids and surgical appliances at substantial discounts.

Appendix "B" is a breakdown of grants made.

No. of applications for assistance	911
No. of applications approved	785
No. of applications not approved	106
No. of applications pending	20

The 106 not approved includes applications not eligible within the terms of the Commission's responsibility and in all such cases the applicant has been referred to the proper source and in most instances appointments made for the applicant by the Commission's staff.

The Kathleen Hammond fund produced an excess of revenue over expenditure of $3,453. This is accounted for in part by a sale of Government Bonds which resulted in a profit of $1,766. Again, by negotiation, the Commission has settled emergent debts totalling $2,024 for $1,012. The Commission in previous reports has suggested amending legislation to permit broadening of the scope of the fund which is presently limited to women who are left widows as a result of their husbands' service in World War I. However, it has now been ascertained that there are resident in Ontario more than 4,600 widows who would qualify for assistance if in need. The Commissioners are presently initiating steps that it is hoped will determine the need for assistance, if any, that prevails in this group.

It is with the deepest regret that I record the death of Col. Wm. Rhoades, D.S.O., M.C., who was, for many years, director of the Commission. Colonel Rhoades not only served his country well as an officer of Canada's permanent force but was tireless in his work in all branches of veteran activity.

Investigation of applications for assistance has been made possible through the co-operation of A. T. Bosanquet and his staff, and the co-operation of officials of all veteran organizations, D.V.A. investigators and municipal authorities. To these I record appreciation.

I record my personal appreciation of the untiring efforts of my colleagues Messrs. Burnet, Harpham, Johnston, Littleford, Searle and Tolley.

To carry out the decisions and policies of the Commissioners we are fortunate in a loyal and able staff in the persons of Messrs. Seaman, Seggie, Buchanan and Miss Mary Macauley.

I am, Sir,

Yours sincerely,

(Sgd.) T. M. Medland

Chairman.

The Honourable Louis P. Cecile Q.C., LL.D. Minister of Public Welfare - Province of Ontario

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario

May it Please Your Honour:

The undersigned has the honour to transmit herewith the Twenty-fifth Annual Report of the Department of Public Welfare, for the Fiscal Year 1955-56.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your Obedient Servant,

Louis P. Gecile,

Minister.

Minister of Public Welfare

In the short span of a quarter of a century, social security has loomed large in governmental activities. Until the world-wide depression forcefully brought the hazards of a highly industrialized society fully to the attention of all our people, virtually no funds were available from public sources for welfare purposes. What a complete turnabout in outlook and acceptance of responsibility has occurred in these past two or three decades! Today, more persons are enjoying full employment with a standard of living beyond that of any other time in our history. Yet the provincial government alone is collecting taxes to meet the costs of welfare for those who are unable to take advantage of our prosperous times in an amount which exceeds all previous governmental expenditures before this revolution in our thinking took place. This change of attitude and the acceptance of public responsibility for the Biblical concept, "We are our brother's keeper", certainly provides a significant study in retrospect.

In the Past—Poverty

History has recorded many types of social abuses which developed as a result of lengthy hours of work, extremely low wages with inhuman and perilous employment conditions. Those for whom work was not available: the sick, the disabled, the old person and children, often lived in misery, and had only the most haphazard existence when financial resources were lacking. The sordid past can be recalled in statements of two of Canada's Prime Ministers who served the country during the early years of this century. The Right Honourable Sir Robert Borden said:

"Poverty and squalor has marred and hindered the progress and development of civilization and democracy".

The Right Honourable Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been quoted as saying:

"It is a great stain upon our civilization that throughout all the ages and in all countries poverty has been the chronic condition of the masses. Poverty! Poverty! . . . This problem involves many problems. It grips the attention of some of the noblest minds of the age".

Today—Public Welfare

The phenomenal growth of public welfare services, since those early days, has been the natural outcome of the concern of our people to remove the economic hazards of life. Indeed, the development of welfare measures may be traced in the light of economic conditions. Social change may be seen in relation to the opportunities which have been and are now available to the masses of our people. Economic and social needs vary in degree. New problems emerge, but these can usually be treated when causes are determined. There is, of course, a lessening of the perils and accompanying hardships when prosperity is maintained and, at this time, our biggest economic boom continues. In Ontario, proportionately fewer persons need aid for economic reasons today than at any other time in our history. Almost all our people are able to participate in the favourable conditions under which we live.

Even within this century anyone can distinguish the results of good economic conditions in contrast to those areas without the natural resources to provide a livelihood. Poverty has also been lessened wherever good medical treatment and hospitals have been available to serve those suffering from disabling illnesses, diseases and incapacitation due to accidents. Wherever dedicated private organizations have operated charitable institutions, and wherever there was an awareness of social ills, great accomplishments have been achieved and recorded in assisting and rehabilitating persons and families.

In addition to the established welfare programmes serving persons in all age groups, and covering all forms of need, economic safeguards have helped to remove many of the hazards of life. These include minimum wages; private insurance; Workmen's Compensation; Unemployment Insurance; health measures; and private retirement funds. Underwriting all this human progress, public investment has kept pace with economic development. Today, the standard of living of Ontario citizens is second to none. It is not beyond hope that poverty can be abolished altogether. Great strides have been taken within a span of a few decades to co-ordinate all welfare resources, and to alleviate and banish the attendant miseries resulting from poverty. We must agree, however, with a report submitted to the United States Congress which reads:

"In the long run, emphasis should be placed on prevention of poverty rather than alleviating poverty after it once develops".

There can be no denying that much progress has been achieved with measures introduced in the treatment of poverty. Elsewhere in this report are listed the specific Acts of the Legislature assigned to this Department for purposes of administration. I would add that, in the past ten years alone, the Legislature has approved 7 new welfare Acts. Twelve Acts were re-enacted or consolidated, and 34 separate amendments were made to existing legislation.

New legislation and changes which require revisions in present legislation are constantly being studied. The introduction of new bills and amendments to the present Acts represent a vast amount of planning, comparison and prediction. They are certainly designed to broaden the welfare base and to bring about improvements—a never-ceasing activity, all in the interests of those to be served.

Giving all due regard to the numerous achievements in relieving distress, there still remain some outstanding and vital problems. The field of human betterment is fraught with pitfalls. Ever-changing concepts point to evident weaknesses, and these must be translated into services which will prove to be more adequate than those existing at present.

The current features in the administration of legislation are reviewed separately in this report. They deal with expansion and refinement in the Acts and Regulations. I would, therefore, comment on other important phases which either require solution in the security field or continued intensive study, which may lead to their solution.

Our Major Concern—The Aged

The major concern today and for the future is centered in the care and treatment of the aged. There is no single panacea which can be found to cope with the varied conditions and requirements of elderly persons; but there is, most certainly, much at stake in their treatment.

The aged, to a large decree, may be described as being economic orphans. The income of elderly persons is decidedly limited. They represent only about one-quarter of the labour force. Studies in the United States indicate that two out of every five men and one of ten women, 65 years of age and over, are employed.

The spectres of old age haunt us all, and it is true that some elderly persons suffer from marked ill-health, physically and mentally. As a result, we sometimes tend to place all the aged in such categories. Yet a great percentage of older persons suffer as much from rejection and dejection because their services and skills in the employment field are no longer required—the result of an arbitrary maximum age restriction of 65 years, in most cases. Small wonder that the so-called declining years produce the period of greatest anxiety in life.

All population statistics point to a continuing increase in the percentage of elderly persons. Most people, today, will live 20 years longer than their grandparents. It has been estimated that, by 1970, one in every ten persons in Ontario will be 65 years of age or over. Our life expectancy, even today, is nearly 70 years.

The risks of ill-health amongst elderly persons are, of course, ever present. Yet amazing results are being achieved through medical science and research both in prolonging life and in maintaining good health. The aged, along with all other groups, are benefiting greatly by the advances in prevention, treatment and control of diseases which hitherto shortened the life span. Accordingly, despite all the health perils surrounding elderly persons, an unusual number still retain their physique and mental alertness beyond all chronological measurement.

There remains, however, the searching question as to whether taxation can continue to give the necessary support to the growing number of the aged in our population. It would seem that, before long, we shall have to adopt radical measures which will utilize the skills and experience of those who can still continue in employment, ably and willingly. There can be no denial that we have exercised a most unwise and discriminatory process in removing so many able-bodied older persons from opportunities to continue a useful contribution to our economy as a whole. Forcing persons into retirement at an arbitrary age-limit has created a serious problem which must, of necessity, be brought under control before it gets out of hand.

Views have been expressed by some authorities that legislation should be enacted to remove this discriminatory retirement of older workers. From the experience acquired in the Department in dealing with the problems of elderly persons, it would seem that we must devote considerable study towards promoting greater opportunities for them to make their contribution to society, as a whole, for as long a period as is possible. Certainly social agencies, churches and community organizations must take a more prominent part in developing positive relationships between the aged and our economy. The question may be raised as to whether a partial solution might be found if the federal government were to give a tax exemption or subsidy to employers who would utilize the services of persons 65 years of age and over. There is no doubt that there are many skilled artisans and alert minds amongst our older citizens who can serve industry and business well, and who could continue to contribute to our national product, if given the opportunity.

Insurance Maintenance

Bismarck, the founder of insurance maintenance programmes, based his concept of a social security system on reasoning which was as simple as it was fundamental. He inaugurated a plan whereby all wage earners could provide, from their own resources, for their needs when they were no longer in a position to do so through their own efforts.

Franklin Roosevelt, when Governor of New York State, in 1929, told the State Legislature: "Our American aged do not want charity but rather old-age comforts to which they are rightfully entitled by their own thrift and foresight in the forms of insurance". Subsequently, as President of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt inaugurated the American plan of Old Age and Survivors Insurance.

In all countries in which the insurance principle is in operation, people are receiving benefits as a right. Little criticism seems to be directed towards insurance schemes wherever they form part of the laws of the country concerned.

The Canadian method of granting assistance to the aged—commonly referred to as Old Age Security—is really a modified "Townsend Plan". It will be recalled that the Townsend Plan proposed a 2% levy on all business transactions so that $200.00 monthly might be given to all aged persons with the proviso that this amount be completely spent within thirty days. Another scheme, similar in pattern, known as the "Colorado Bonanza" closely resembles the Canadian plan. Under the Colorado Bonanza a payment of $45.00 per month was to be made to all aged persons. When the insurance programme was adopted in the United States these "handout methods" were largely forgotten.

It is certain that substantial sums of money are being collected in Canada and are supposedly being paid into a special fund to provide pensions for those 70 years of age and over. It is quite evident that the system for the distribution and use of these funds leaves much to be desired. The principle of "no means test" is not actually observed. It is apparent that the aged have to submit to a form of means test through income tax reports. Also, those receiving funds through other levels of government undoubtedly submit to a full scale means test where aid is required beyond the basic payment. In both scope and value to the wage earners of Canada, the Old Age Security scheme is inferior to the insurance plans of the United States and other advanced countries.

An income-insurance programme is, of course, based upon the productive years of the person insured, and the benefits received in the non-productive period are directly related to income previously earned. In Canada, heavy payments are exacted from the whole working population to provide for an inadequate allowance at the age of 70 years. In the United States the social security programme gives recognition to women at the age of 62 years, men at 65 years of age, totally and permanently disabled persons at the age of 50 years, and to survivors of the breadwinner—widows and children—all of whom qualify for insurance benefits, and, in addition, may receive lump sum payments to cover funeral expenses of the insured. Deductions from payroll and wages—from the employer and employee, respectively—provide a comparatively simple method of maintaining and building up the Trust Fund. Administrative costs for the whole plan represent only about 2% of the benefits paid. Better than 90% of the population is eligible for benefits. The method of direct taxation has been replaced through the medium of the Old Age and Survivors Insurance programme.

Administrative Features

In administering all of our welfare programmes, in relation to individual cases, we must deal with a multitude of legislative qualifications in order to establish eligibility for assistance. All this involves a vast amount of processing activity, with a tremendous volume of paper work. It has been noted in the past that we have been able to destroy hundreds of thousands of obsolete paper records on old files by retaining the essential data on microfilms. This is the modern and progressive approach in maintaining these necessary records.

It is certain, however, that with the need to acquire such a wide variety of information on cases, the paper work, at times, becomes almost overbearing. We have been and are still making a most determined effort to consolidate many of our forms, eliminate others and dispense with as many of the questions concerning individual persons as possible. This applies particularly to the process of submitting applications for welfare services coming under the jurisdiction of the Department.

As a result of our studies, many forms have been redesigned and simplified. In the series relating to application forms for Old Age Assistance, Disabled Persons' Allowances and Blind Persons' Allowances, one form replaced five. It has also been possible to ease the burden of many of our administrative procedures, and to avoid duplication of effort as a result of our continuing studies. I am convinced that our administrative and field staff have been relieved of many thousands of hours of work by the introduction of simpler and yet more adequate procedures in relation to necessary paper work.

Staff

There are about 420 persons on the staff of the Department at present. In total, this number has not changed much during the past few years, although we have been able to obtain a number of new replacements. These newer staff members have come with good backgrounds, and some have had previous experience in the welfare field. For the most part, their services are being used in the specialized areas of our work. With their varying backgrounds and experience, they are making a significant contribution to the development of our services.

The quality of the work of the Department largely depends upon the character of the staff. We have capable men and women dealing with the many diversified problems which relate to persons in need. All work towards the goal of the easement of these difficulties. In general, our staff members serve the Department, and the people for whom we are responsible, with diligence, and with that essential sense of respect for human worth and dignity which must accompany all our efforts.

The senior members of the staff accept their responsibilities in the fullest possible degree. The Directors of the several Branches have all submitted separate statements concerning the programmes coming under their charge. It would be difficult to single out all who are accepting special responsibilities and who carry out their duties in a most capable fashion. We have a number of staff persons who are specialists in administrative procedures and practices, while others have supervisory functions to perform in the field. Much responsibility falls on the Executive Officers, William G. Smith and Stanley Crow. I am indeed grateful for the high level of performance achieved by all members of staff.

Conclusion

The many legislative changes which have been introduced are being utilized to the fullest extent possible at this time. Studies are continuing in the related phases of our work. In particular, consideration for the future is being given to the possibility of establishing a home-maker's service which could benefit families and individuals during periods of illness or stress arising from emergency situations. Concentrated efforts are also being directed into research activity both from administrative and social points of view.

We are grateful for all the help we receive from the many private organizations engaged in welfare work. In particular, a special word of appreciation must go to that large group of municipal officials who assist and support us so much in dealing with the many acute problems which arise daily and require treatment without delay.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JAMES S. BAND, Deputy Minister.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE BRANCH

• • • • • • • • Director's Report

This is the fifth annual report of the Old Age Assistance Branch. The Old Age Assistance Regulations (Canada), which came into effect January 1, 1952, were replaced by new federal regulations in this fiscal year. A supplemental agreement was entered into by the Province and the Government of Canada to adopt the new regulations, commencing August 1, 1955. Whereas the revised regulations introduced various changes in the details of the programme, payments continued up to a maximum of $40 a month under income ceilings which remain unchanged since January 1, 1952.

The payments to Old Age Assistance recipients amounted to $9,919,966 for 1955-56, an increase of $135,235 over the previous year. An average of 22,010 persons a month received payments, an increase of 162 persons a month over the previous year when an average of 21,848 persons benefited. The number of recipients at March 31, was 21,731. This represents a decrease of 1.5% over recipients as at March 31, 1955, and is 13.3% of Ontario's estimated population in the 65-69 year age bracket. Ontario's percentage of recipients to estimated population in the age group 65-69 is the lowest of all Provinces and is well below the national figure of approximately 21%. The proportion of persons receiving the maximum payment of $40 a month remained constant at 78%, while the average payment during March was $36.90 for all recipients.

During the year 7,386 persons applied for assistance, a decrease of 9% over the previous year. Assistance was granted to 6,786 persons. More than half (52%) of the persons were granted assistance at age 65 and only 8.2% were 69 years of age at the date of grant. 42% of the persons were men and 58% women; 43% were married and 57% were classed as single. Almost half of the single persons were widows. The majority of applicants resided in urban areas and about 60% were living in their own or a relative's home—and again this year, two out of every five of the applicants had no real or personal property.

Blind Persons' Allowances

The Blind Persons' Regulations (Canada) which have been in effect since January 1, 1952, were revoked and new federal regulations substituted in this fiscal year. The new regulations introduced various changes in the details of the programme but more important changes occurred when the federal Act was amended lowering the age of eligibility from 21 to 18 years and increasing the maximum permissible income by $120 a year for unmarried recipients and $240 a year for married recipients. A supplemental agreement was entered into by the Province and the Government of Canada to adopt the new regulations, commencing August 1, 1955, and to conform to the amendments to the federal Act, the latter changes being effective July 1, 1955. Maximum allowance continued to be $40 a month.

The payments to recipients under the Blind Persons' Allowances Act amounted to $816,887 for 1955-56, an increase of $3,811 over the previous year. An average of 1,727 persons a month received payments as compared with an average of 1,731 during the previous year. At March 31, 1955, 1,731 persons were receiving the allowance and at March 31, 1956, the number was down to 1,719 persons, a decrease of less than 1%. Of the recipients, 94% were receiving the maximum allowance of $40 a month. The average payment during March for all recipients was $39.35.

During the year 270 persons made application for the allowance, a decrease of 12% over the previous year. The allowance was granted to 206 persons of whom 45% were men and 55% women; 36% were married and 64% were classed as single. Three out of every five of the persons classed as single were unmarried. Approximately 64% of the persons were living in their own or a relative's home, the remainder living in rented accommodation or in institutions. Slightly more than two out of every five of the persons had no real or personal property.

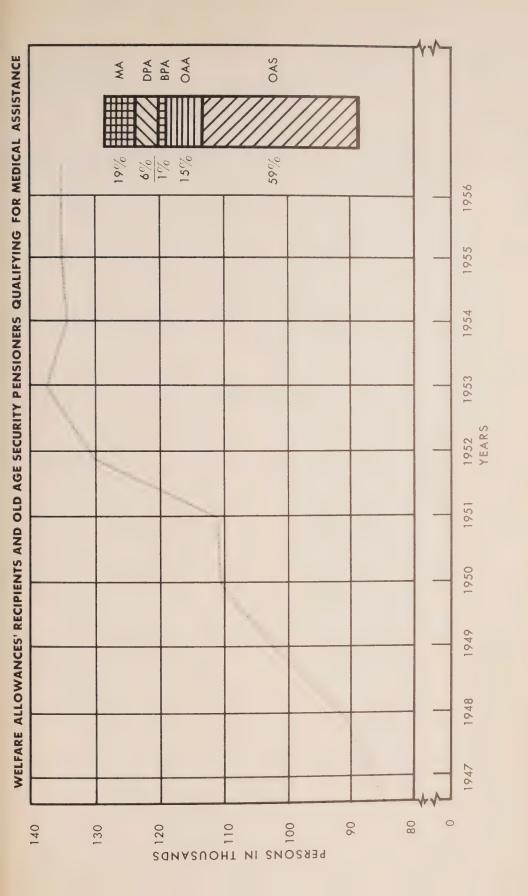

Medical Care

An agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association continued to make available free medical care to recipients of old age assistance, blind persons' allowances and persons transferred to old age security at age 70. Old age security pensioners who had not previously received assistance or an allowance from the Province may also apply for free medical care under this plan.

Payments by the Province to the Ontario Medical Association amounted to $1,312,886 during 1955-56 for medical services to recipients of old age assistance, blind persons' allowances and old age security pensioners.

A comparison of these expenditures, with the previous year, follows:

· · · · · · Director's Report

This fourth annual report outlines the activities of the Disabled Persons' Allowances Branch during the twelve-month period, April 1, 1955, to March 31, 1956.

The Province continued to make allowances available to totally and permanently disabled persons under The Disabled Persons' Allowances Act, in accordance with federal legislation and an agreement between the Government of Canada and the Province of Ontario. This federal-provincial agreement came into effect on January 1, 1955, following some two and a half years of the payment of allowances under an entirely provincial programme.

Two new groups of disabled persons were added during the year under review. The first was comprised of unemployable men whose wives and children were receiving assistance under The Mothers' Allowances Act, provided these men could be classified as being totally and permanently disabled. The total assistance to such families was thereby increased. The second group were disabled Indians living on reservations.

Our caseload has continued to show a steady and significant increase each month. At the beginning of the fiscal year (April 1, 1955), 6,623 persons were in receipt of Disabled Persons' Allowances. A total of 1,855 new cases were accepted, 104 persons had their allowances reinstated, and 20 cases were transferred to Ontario from other provinces. With 295 recipients being transferred to Old Age Assistance, 312 deaths occurring, allowances having to be discontinued in 471 cases, and 23 persons moving to other provinces, the net increase in our caseload was 878. This meant that on March 31, 1956, 7,501 persons were receiving allowances, a net increase of 13% over the previous year. The total expenditure for allowances was $3,428,496—the provincial share amounting to $1,710,585. In addition, payment by the province for medical services to our recipients amounted to $90,563, and administration costs were $70,256, this latter amount representing slightly under 2% of all expenditures.

Statistical Review

The statistical tables which follow this report reveal considerable information about our new cases. A selection of the most significant features are presented here:

- (1) 3,655 new cases were reviewed. It was possible to grant allowances to 1,855, or 51%, of these persons; 1,550, or 42%, were not eligible; decisions were deferred in 59 cases (2%); while 191 persons, or 5%, either withdrew their applications or were deceased shortly after submitting an application. (See Table 1)
- (2) The ages of the 1,855 new recipients were as follows:
 - (a) 546, almost one-third, were 18 to 34 years of age:
 - (b) 417, more than one-fifth, were 35 to 49 years of age;
 - (c) however, nearly one-half—887—were in the age range 50-64 years; (and 5 additional persons were 65 years of age and over).

(See Table 4)

(3) Mental Disorders continued to be the most prevalent type of disability among the new recipients of allowances—514, or 28%, being classified under this heading.

Diseases of the Nervous System and Sense Organs followed closely, with 473, or 26%, having disabilities in this category.

Diseases of the Heart and Blood Vessels accounted for 350 cases, or 16%; while the next most significant group was comprised of 200 persons (11%) suffering from Arthritis, Osteomyelitis and other diseases of Bone and Joint.

The remainder, some 363 recipients, or 19%, were totally and permanently disabled as a result of cancers, tumours, accidents, poliomyelitis, diabetes with complications, tuberculosis, and other miscellaneous conditions.

(See Table 5)

- (4) Other tables give data concerning the sex and marital status of the new recipients; the types of municipalities in which they resided, and the kinds of living accommodation; the value of real and personal property, if any, owned by them; and whether or not they, or their spouses, were in receipt of other forms of public assistance or had income from private sources.
- (5) A further table is concerned with those persons, a total of 1,550, who were not eligible for the allowance. Most of them, 1,354, or 87%, could not be classified as being totally and permanently disabled, while the remainder, 196, or 13%, had income from other sources in excess of the amount specified in the legislation, or were patients in hospitals, or ineligible for other reasons. (See Table 10)

Rehabilitation Services

At the 1955 Session, the Ontario Legislature gave unanimous approval to and passed new legislation entitled The Rehabilitation Services Act. Responsibility for developing a new programme of rehabilitation for handicapped persons under this Act was given by the Legislature to the Department of Public Welfare, and the administration was to be organized within the framework of the Disabled Persons' Allowances Branch.

The Act gave authority to proceed with the signing of agreements between Ontario and the Government of Canada, and on September 26, 1955, the "Co-ordination of Rehabilitation of Handicapped Persons Agreement" was signed, so that Ontario might be in a position to obtain federal participation in its rehabilitation programme. This was the first stage towards the use of Schedule "R", a federal government schedule designed for the training of disabled persons. This schedule forms part of the Vocational Training Agreement made under the Vocational Training Co-ordination Act (Canada). Schedule "R" sets forth the terms and conditions whereby the federal government will share in the costs of the training of handicapped persons. Negotiations were underway at the close of this fiscal year to complete the necessary administrative arrangements with the Government of Canada and to clear the way for the commencement of operations in this Province.

A Committee of five persons was appointed by the Province "to advise the Minister respecting the development and provision of rehabilitation services." Work was begun on the drafting of the Regulations which were subsequently approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council on February 23, 1956.

The new programme is designed to achieve the ultimate goal of the placement of the handicapped person in employment, particularly through planned vocational training. Under the Act and Regulations, provisions have been made for the acceptance of applications from handicapped persons who may be selected for such training, for the payment of the cost of training, and for the granting of maintenance allowances to those who cannot otherwise arrange to take care of their living expenses while undergoing training.

During the coming year, we are looking forward to the development of a rehabilitation programme which should benefit many handicapped persons throughout this province. The field services of the 17 District Welfare Offices of the Department will be available for work with our rehabilitation cases, and many private organizations will be offering every assistance in the rehabilitation process. The effectiveness of the whole programme will depend a great deal upon the assistance and cooperation of many persons and groups including doctors, personnel engaged in rehabilitation work, private organizations, municipalities—particularly municipal welfare officers, employers, community groups and endeavours, as well as the several branches and departments of government at both provincial and federal levels.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES BRANCH

• • • • • • • Director's Report

Two important amendments in the history of Mothers' Allowances legislation came into effect on March 28, 1956. For the first time since the inception of the Act, provision has been made to include as eligible applicants:

- (1) Mothers with children born out of wedlock;
- (2) Permanently unemployable fathers caring for their dependent children.

Children Born Out of Wedlock

An allowance may now be paid to a mother

"Whose child or children were born out of wedlock and who has cared for and maintained each child, on behalf of whom application for an allowance is made, for a period of two years following the birth of the child."

For some years past, it has been the policy of the Department to extend benefits to foster mothers on behalf of children born out of wedlock. However, as a condition of grant, it was necessary to assure that the natural parents' whereabouts were unknown. In others words, if the natural mother abandoned her children, they could possibly be provided for under the Foster Mother Clause. The unmarried mothers, however, who tried to provide homes for their illegitimate children, were unable to qualify for benefits.

In dealing with Mothers' Allowances legislation, the welfare of the child is our chief concern. Therefore, there seemed no logical reason why one group of children should benefit as a result of the mother's desertion and the other group be deprived of benefits simply because their mother tried to provide a home for them. It also followed that since we are interested primarily in the child's welfare, the emphasis should not be placed on the marital status of the child's parents.

In reviewing the applications under the new provisions of The Mothers' Allowances Act, many cases will undoubtedly come to the attention of the Branch where the putative father of the child in question has never been approached regarding maintenance. The applicant mother will be encouraged to acquaint the local Children's Aid Society with the situation, in order that some effort can be made to procure maintenance from the father of the child, where possible. The new legislation has not been written into the Statutes for the purpose of relieving the putative father of the child of his legal and financial responsibility. This being entirely new legislation, it is quite restrictive in its application. It is to be noted that the mother is required to have had the care and maintenance of the child for a period of at least two years. However, when the needs of this particular group of people can better be determined, it is quite reasonable to assume that refinements to this particular section will be introduced.

Permanently Unemployable Fathers

"Where a father who is permanently unemployable satisfies the residence requirements for a mother under Subsection (1) and the mother is dead or is absent from the home for a period of at least six months, an allowance as provided in Subsection (1) may be paid to the father towards the support of his child or children under eighteen years of age, residing with him, in circumstances under which the child or children would not be cared for properly without the assistance of an allowance."

Under the provisions of the new amendment, permanently unemployable fathers who have the care of dependent children, can qualify in their own right for Mothers' Allowances. It will now be possible to pay assistance directly to a permanently unemployable father caring for his family. He will receive the same benefits as would be paid to his wife were she living in the home as a Mothers' Allowances beneficiary. Previously, the only way that assistance could be provided for the children was to arrange for relatives or close friends to take the children into their care and then pay the regular foster mother's assistance on behalf of the children. If there were a number of children involved, it meant that possibly two or three foster homes had to be established to care for the children, thus defeating the very purpose for which Mothers' Allowances assistance was designed, namely, to keep the family together as a unit. To date it has not been possible to estimate the number of applications that may be received under this new clause. However, it is reasonable to assume that ten to fifteen percent of the present foster mother case load may be transferred under this new classification. As of March 31, 1956, there were 303 foster mothers receiving assistance under The Mothers' Allowances Act. In approximately twenty percent of these cases, the permanently unemployable father was living in the home with the child or children. While it is true that not every one of the fathers will be capable of giving proper care to his children, a large percentage could, if given financial assistance, provide directly for their families.

Desertion

In addition to the aforementioned amendments, the period of desertion has been reduced from one year to six months. Notwithstanding the broadening of the legislation in relation to desertion cases, it is interesting to note the decline in the desertion case load in recent years. As of March 31, 1956, there were 735 deserted families as compared to 744 for the same period last year. This represents a 1.21% decrease in the number of mothers receiving assistance as a result of the desertion of their husbands.

The decrease is accounted for by the fact that every new and active case is thoroughly investigated by the Branch and every effort made to locate the deserting husband. When he is located, the information as to his whereabouts is given to the applicant or beneficiary in order that the proper authorities can be contacted and the man subsequently approached regarding the maintenance of his family.

Rehabilitation

In the previous Annual Report, mention was made of The Rehabilitation Services Act, 1955. During the same year, The Mothers' Allowances Act had been amended so as to permit permanently unemployable husbands of beneficiaries to take advantage of the services provided under the new legislation. However, it was not until the latter part of the fiscal year that the Rehabilitation Services Branch accepted applications. For this reason, only a few of the permanently unemployable men on the Mothers' Allowances case load have applied for and been accepted for training.

During the year, considerable emphasis has been placed on the rehabilitation of beneficiaries. Our Field Workers have played a very important role in this programme and, as a result of their efforts, a number of beneficiaries have become self-supporting on a temporary, if not on a permanent basis. The size of the family and employment opportunities determine to a large degree whether or not the mother can avail herself of these services.

Penitentiary Cases

During the year, 75 applicants whose husbands were incarcerated were granted assistance. While these cases are not provided for directly in The Mothers' Allowances Act, it has been the policy for a number of years past to consider them under the Order-in-Council Clause of The Mothers' Allowances Act. As of March 31, 1956, there were 120 cases on the allowance list receiving assistance in this category. Since 1951, $285,238.88 has been paid to this particular group of mothers. In addition to penitentiary cases, the Department has extended its policy to include mothers whose husbands have been committed to a term in a reformatory. However, again the general policy applies that the prisoner must have remaining approximately 16 to 18 months of the sentence to serve at the time the mother makes application.

Administration

The changes occurring within the framework of The Mothers' Allowances Act and Regulations have not all been with regard to policy. As a matter of fact, one very important change in administration, which will ultimately save thousands of clerical hours within the year, to say nothing of the waste of material, is the introduction of the combination application and investigation form.

In order to render a more efficient service to the public, the records of the Branch have been changed over to a numerical system, replacing the previous alphabetical one.

General

There has been during the year a slight increase in the number of benefiting families. However, compared to the case load of five years ago, there is a substantial decrease. This can best be illustrated by means of the accompanying table.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES BRANCH

	1951-52	1952-53	1953-54	1954-55	1955-56
Families Assisted Monthly	7,527	7,703	7,156	7,155	7,241
Children Assisted Monthly	16,237	16,687	15,783	16,145	16,171
Benefits Paid Monthly	$503,339	$530,279	$509,775	$545,454	$564,051

(Figures represent monthly averages of total for fiscal year.)

It should be noted that the decrease in the overall case load during this period does not represent a similar decrease in the number of benefiting children. In other words, it can be presumed that cancellations during the years have involved, for the most part, families with only one child, while on the other hand families added to the rolls have been larger in size.

The needs of the larger family are much greater than those with only one or two children as may be expected, and particularly in view of the fact that the mother with a number of children is not able to avail herself to the same extent of employment opportunities as a means of subsidizing her income. This would also explain the reason for increased expenditures, notwithstanding the fact that the case load has been reduced.

During the fiscal year, $5,308,046.24 has been paid to Ontario mothers in the form of Basic Rate, and an additional $798,816.33 in Special Assistance. Some 4,904 mothers have, during this period, qualified for Fuel Assistance, and a total of $607,541.56 has been paid to the beneficiaries for this purpose. The total cost of the programme, including administration, is borne entirely by the Province

Conclusion

We take this opportunity to express our appreciation to the Field Workers who are very understanding of the problems facing those whom misfortune has struck, also to the inside staff for their co-operation in fulfilling the tasks assigned to them.

Grateful appreciation is also tendered to the Welfare Administrators in the various municipalities, to the Superintendents of local Children's Aid Societies, and to the representatives of Welfare Agencies throughout the Province who have helped to carry out this most worthy programme.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

• • • • • • • Director's Report

The Child Welfare Services of Ontario encompass the prevention of child neglect and the care of children whose homes have broken down. These services are provided through a network of 55 Children's Aid Societies and 47 Institutions for the specialized and general residential care of children and unmarried mothers. The Child Welfare Branch, through its administrative and supervisory services, ensures that legislative requirements are met and encourages the proper development of social services to children.

Twenty-five years have passed since the control of child welfare came under the Department of Public Welfare. The years before 1930 were formative years in which community child welfare resources and the present structure took shape. Since 1930 Children's Aid Societies and Institutions for children and youth have become integral parts of the total public welfare services Ontario provides for its people.

The past quarter-century has been of historic importance. The opening period of crippling depression ended in the devastation of global war, which induced the dramatic upsurge in population and industry.

These events have made an impact on all Canadians and affected the direction of child welfare development. Children can not escape the destructive turmoil of depression and war, but they should not miss the new opportunities for education, health, happy home life and secure family relationships which are their rightful heritage.

Increasing Knowledge of Children

Less dramatic than the headline events of the past twenty-five years—but of significance—is the increasing knowledge of children. Medicine and the social sciences have provided deeper insight into child development and behaviour. Psychiatric studies, in emphasizing the vital family bonds, have had a profound effect on the thinking of child welfare workers. One definite result has been the prevention of family breakdown and child neglect as a primary mandatory service in child welfare. Another has been the placement of separated children in adoption homes selected in keeping with the children's needs. Still another has been a clarification of the role of institutions for children. Recognizing the need of children for family life, many institutions which formerly cared for infants and pre-school children, are seeking a more specialized purpose. Several have undertaken the care and treatment of emotionally disturbed youngsters who cannot fit into family life.

In earlier years, Children's Institutions and Children's Aid Societies developed along independent and almost divergent paths. Today, the particular benefits of both are recognized. Institutions can best provide care for children where temporary constructive experience in group living or special treatment is necessary.

Skilled Workers Required

Evidence points up the need for skilled workers in institutions and societies if children are to be restored to happy, useful lives. As services become more effective, taxpayers and contributors may be assured of full value for their investment in child welfare.

The twenty-five year period covered by this report may be divided into three phases: Economic Depression 1930-1938, War 1939-1945, and Recovery 1946-1955. A brief review reflects the evolutionary character of child welfare during these periods.

Economic Depression 1930-1938

By 1930, the child welfare pattern consisted of 58 Children's Aid Societies and 36 Children's Institutions, most providing simple custodial care for dependent children. Although there was growing recognition of the value of foster home placement, "Shelters" were often used for long-term care of children. The lack of accepted child care standards and the dearth of skilled workers led to an unevenness of service among institutions and societies. Many operated on an uncertain and unstable financial base, and administrative procedures were undeveloped.

It was becoming increasingly clear that sound Child Welfare Services could not be built on a foundation of work and funds from volunteer sources. From private agencies largely supported by socially-minded citizens, child welfare was changing into a semi-public system with an increasing proportion of funds derived from public sources. With this shift to tax revenues came an obligation on the Department to set standards of practice for societies and institutions, and to supervise their financial and administrative operation.

The War Years 1939-1945

The years from 1939 to 1945 were difficult years for the Child Welfare Organization. With the rapidly increased industrial output to meet the demands of war, employment rose markedly from early 1940. This might have been expected to lead to a lessening of the demand for Child Welfare Services but, in fact, the opposite was true. Enlistments of fathers and the opportunities for mothers to work in war industries left many families vulnerable to breakdown and dependency. For such families the timely provision of Child Protection Services often meant the difference between a broken home and a home that would remain secure and intact until the serviceman returned.

A sharp rise in adoptions during this period was due, in part, to the desire of many servicemen with foster children in their homes to have adoptions completed before being posted overseas. A steadily increasing public acceptance of adoption also played a part in the rise from 935 adoptions completed in 1938 to a total of 1,939 in 1945.

Shortly after the outbreak of war, the Province, through the Department of Public Welfare, promised full co-operation in a national plan to bring British children to Canada where they would escape the hazards of war. Such a plan was devised, and subsequently 624 British war guests were received into Ontario homes. The selection of these homes, and supervision of the placements until the children returned to their homeland, were undertaken by Children's Aid Societies.

An additional wartime responsibility undertaken by the Child Welfare Organization was the investigation and supervision of about 14,000 military cases each year for the Dependents' Allowances Board and the Dependents' Board of Trustees. As the war came to a close requests for service in military cases shifted to investigations prior to discharge of servicemen and assistance in their rehabilitation.

The serious depletion in numbers of experienced child welfare workers, because of enlistment and replacement by inexperienced staff, meant an inevitable decline in the quality of service over a rapidly expanding caseload. Important protection work had to be postponed with the result that complaints of neglect were not investigated promptly. More children had to be taken into care at the expense of the community and, once in care, they tended to remain longer than necessary. The shortage of suitable foster homes because of the pressure on housing in urban areas was a further wartime difficulty.

The Years of Recovery 1946-1955

The shortage of effective workers was not immediately relieved at the end of the war. The personal services of skilled staff which could reduce family breakdown, speed the return of children to their own homes, and place others in permanent adoption homes, did not become available until as late as 1947. After 1947, with the discharge from the services of former employees, the increasing skill of wartime staffs and the newly trained postwar workers entering child welfare, the quality of service rose considerably. The marked increase in child welfare costs, however, and the large number of children being maintained in temporary homes at public expense gave rise to increasing concern.

Minister's Committee

In 1951, the Minister appointed a committee on child care services and adoption to enquire and report: (1) Why so many children were in the pay-care of Children's Aid Societies; (2) Whether the existing situation was socially and financially in the interest of the children concerned and the people of the Province as a whole; and (3) What improvement might be made in adoption practices.

The committee reported in 1953 that the number of children in pay-care of societies was excessive and that this situation was not socially and financially desirable. Believing that maintenance costs could be reduced in direct proportion to the financial support given protection and adoption services, the committee recommended that a new basis be found for Provincial grants to societies. Appointment of an adoption consultant within the Child Welfare Branch to facilitate adoption placements by societies, and particularly inter-agency placements, was advised.

Subsequently, a review of the entire Child Welfare Legislation was undertaken. The result was the Child Welfare Act, 1954, proclaimed on January 1, 1955.

The New Child Welfare Act

The Child Welfare Act consolidated the Children's Protection Act, the Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and the Adoption Act. In line with new knowledge respecting the needs of children and the financial pressures on the residents of the northern territories, special protection grants intended to improve the service to children living with their own parents in unorganized areas were first established for northern societies. Now, in consequence of a recently completed departmental analysis of child welfare statistics in relation to the changing economic influences, a new provincial grant structure has been devised for all societies. These grants will be based upon the amount of time devoted to the prevention and repair of family breakdown which should result in reducing the proportion of the child population in the case of societies. These grants are intended not only to serve the social interests of the community but, through keeping to a minimum the number of children maintained at public expense, to effect a considerable saving to the taxpayer. The earlier grant structure had been related to the amount of the voluntary funds collected, but in no sense to the way in which these funds were spent. This resulted in the largest grants being paid to the societies with the greatest financial resources.

Adoption Clearance Service

The Adoption Clearance Service, started in 1954, has more than justified its existence. Under the supervision of the adoption consultant, the service continues to circulate among all societies in Ontario a bulletin containing descriptions of children for whom adoption homes cannot be found in their own area, and adoption applicants for whom children are not available locally. Most societies have more than enough applications for infants and young children. The children listed in the bulletin generally are difficult to place because of age, physical handicap, racial origin, or religious faith. In 1956, 92 children were listed with the adoption clearance service and 37 adoption orders have been obtained for children listed. No price can be set on the social benefits conferred by adoption upon these children. From a purely financial point of view, however, the saving to taxpayers in maintenance costs over the period these children would normally have been maintained at public expense would be close to half a million dollars.

Efforts to find permanent adoption homes for more children are continuing. Particular consideration is being given to the placement of children with special needs. Total adoptions in Ontario over the past ten years have increased by 93%, from 2,116 orders obtained in 1946 to an all-time peak of 4,073 orders in 1955.

Summary

It is generally accepted that in all but the most exceptional cases the interests of children and taxpayers are best served when children can be raised in their own homes or properly selected adoption homes.

During the depression and war years, due to the prevailing social and economic conditions, but apparently even more to the weaknesses of the Child Welfare Services, the proportion of the child population maintained at public expense in homes other than their own increased at a rate greater than the increase in the child population.

The proportions of tax revenues diverted, in consequence, to child maintenance increased accordingly.

From 1947 onward, with a somewhat improved but relatively stabilized per capita purchasing power and improving Child Welfare Services, a reducing proportion of the child population was admitted to child-caring agencies. An increasing proportion in the care of those agencies was returned to their own homes or placed on adoption.

Guided by these trends and contributing in a large part to them are the recent changes and the on-going amendments to the Child Welfare Legislation.

To such an extent is this true that in the face of a rapidly increasing child population the actual number of children maintained at public expense has decreased by several thousands. As might be expected the proportion of the tax revenue diverted to the maintenance of children is also declining.

It would appear, therefore, that the interests of children and taxpayers alike were being properly served by the recent legislative changes.

Throughout the post-war years mutual understanding and closer integration of Children's Aid and Institutional services have progressed. The Association of Children's Aid Societies and the Association of Institutions for Children and Youth have actively fostered a co-operative spirit. An appreciation of each other's functions and consequent co-operation are developing between Children's Aid Societies, on the one hand, and Provincial and Municipal Welfare Services on the other.

Without these developments, the progress, particularly in the postwar years, could not have occurred.

· · · · · · · Director's Repo

Nearly 300 nurseries were under the supervision of the Day Nurseries Branch during the past year. Of this number 254 were open on March 31, 1956, and 90% had been granted licences. Three per cent of the nurseries had applied too recently to have been licensed, and the remaining 7% were operating below standard. The steady climb from year to year in the number and percentage of licensed nurseries represents great progress in the provision of a satisfactory programme of care for young children.

Nurseries for Children of Working Mothers

Of the 7,700 children attending all types of nurseries, nearly one quarter are children whose mothers are employed. Many of these mothers are the sole support of their children and would be in need of public assistance if unable to be gainfully employed. These children have the opportunity for wholesome activity under skilled supervision while their mothers are at work. The realization of the benefits their children are thus receiving helps to maintain the morale of these women who have had to assume the double responsibility of breadwinner and mother. These children and their mothers come to look on the day nursery as a second home. They can always find friendly help and guidance from the supervisory staff.

The remaining 6,000 children are in attendance at half-day nurseries and private kindergartens where the programme provides an opportunity for more companionship and a wider variety of play materials than most homes can offer.

The Half-Day Programme

A new feature of the half-day programme is the growing tendency for the mothers to participate in the organization and operation of the nursery. Many nurseries started out by utilizing the services of the mothers to keep expenses at a minimum. However, experience has shown that other values derived from the co-operative nursery school are even more important. Each parent sees her child in relation to other children and thus comes to understand him better. Often the mother learns, both from other mothers and the experienced staff, more effective ways of guiding her own child. The creative talents of all can be used to the advantage of the whole group. Thus, some are especially good at telling stories, others in music and art. The children's horizons can be broadened by short excursions around the community if mothers are available to accompany them on these trips. It is felt that this type of nursery will become increasingly important throughout the province.

It is interesting to note that of the 254 nurseries operating on March 31, only four occupy premises especially constructed as nurseries. The rest are located in buildings originally planned for some other purpose. One hundred and eleven are lodged in private homes, and 71 occupy space in churches or synagogues. Another 49 nurseries are housed in some type of public hall, and 19 are in school buildings. The work of the municipal health and fire departments in inspecting these various types of premises and seeing that necessary alterations are carried out to make them safe and suitable for young children continues to be an invaluable feature of the licensing programme.

The day nurseries for children of working mothers continue to be associated with urban life. Ninety-five percent of such nurseries are located in centres having a population of over thirty thousand. Only 64% of the half-day nurseries are found in these larger centres.

Nurseries for Handicapped Children

The increasing service being rendered by the nurseries to handicapped pre-school children is worthy of mention. It has been found that children with visual, hearing, physical or mental handicaps can benefit from the nursery setting and activities. A few nurseries are devoted exclusively to children with one type of handicap, such as cerebral palsy, blindness or deafness. On the other hand, many nurseries are accepting one or two handicapped children into the normal group. The supervisors of these nurseries have undertaken to gain an understanding of these handicaps in order to help these children to overcome their difficulties as far as possible.

Appreciation

The staff of the branch is grateful to the many hundreds of community officials and nursery operators who have co-operated each year in the efforts to provide the best of supervision for the young children entrusted to the nurseries.

HOMES FOR THE AGED

AGED

• • • • • • Director's Report

During the year under review one additional new Home with full segregated care has been built. At the same time three additions and/or extensions to existing buildings have been completed.

Five new Homes providing segregated care were under construction. Three of these are to replace existing Homes and two are additional new Homes. Six additions and/or extensions to existing buildings were under construction.

Plans were being drawn for six new Homes of which five are to replace existing Homes and one is an additional new Home. Furthermore, one complete new Home is being contemplated.

It will be noted from the above that the building programme for new Homes providing full segregated care for different classes of residents, as initiated by The Homes for the Aged Act, 1949, has been actively pushed forward.

Segregated care in the new type of Homes means separate segregated sections for residents who are normal, ambulatory people, for residents who are bed-ridden, for residents who are mentally confused or senile and require special care, and finally, a section for married couples. It must be quite obvious that people who are bed-ridden or semi-bed-ridden, or who are senile, should not be accommodated in the same sections with normal elderly people, both for their own sakes and for the sake of the normal ambulatory residents.

Bed Care

Statistics show that the demand for accommodation of residents requiring bed care is increasing more rapidly than the accommodation demands of any of the other three types of care.

Since bed care facilities have been provided in the Homes for the Aged, the alternative of the more costly hospital care has been correspondingly lessened. This care is for residents who are bed-ridden or semi-bed-ridden. They receive expert care under the supervision of physicians experienced in the treatment of the infirmities of the aged.

With an increasing population, a lengthened life span, and a continuous movement of people to more crowded accommodation in urban centres, the problem of elderly people requiring bed care will continue to grow. The growth of bed care facilities, as provided by The Homes for the Aged Act, 1949 and subsequent amendments, is helping to meet this problem.

Special Care

Special Care refers to that type of care given to people who are mentally incompetent and are ineligible for committal to an institution under The Mental Hospitals Act but do require care, supervision and control for their protection.

Statistics show that the demand for accommodation of people requiring this type of care is also growing, but not to such an extent as that for accommodation of people requiring bed care.

The segregated care for this class of person provided in the newer type of Home is helping to meet this growing need.

Normal Care

The reasons given for the demand for bed care facilities apply as well to the growth in demand for accommodation of elderly people who are perfectly normal but for one reason or another need care in varying degrees.

The fact that alternative accommodation for these persons, which will be discussed later, is being provided may mean that the demand for their accommodation in Homes for the Aged will not increase to the same extent as that for bed care and special care facilities.

Married Couples

Prior to the passing of The Homes for the Aged Act, 1949, no facilities existed for married couples to live together in a Home for the Aged. Segregated quarters for married couples are being provided in all the new Homes being erected in the Province and this much needed facility is being utilized to a larger extent each month.

Charitable Institutions

The Charitable Institutions Act, 1950, was introduced to encourage participation of religious, fraternal and other private organizations in dealing with the problems of the elderly.

The figures given in Statistical Table No. IV show that this purpose is being achieved. With a $2,000.00 government grant per bed towards the cost of building, two new Homes were completed during the year, four were under construction, two additions and/or extensions were under construction, and plans were being drawn for another two additions and/or extensions.

A government grant of 20c. per day per resident towards the cost of maintaining the resident assists these private organizations.

The Elderly Persons Housing Aid Act, 1952

The provisions of this Act have been discussed in previous reports and therefore will not be repeated. Table V gives figures showing the extent of the building programme up to the present time. It is of interest to note that 110 complete new dwelling units were constructed during the year and that five municipalities are planning to build dwelling units under the terms set by this Act.

The Homes for the Aged Act, 1955

Special Home Care came under The Homes for the Aged Act, 1955 and the intent of this legislation is to provide suitable accommodation for elderly persons in private homes in the community. This new measure produces a counterpart of the care provided in the homes for the aged.

People who qualify for this special type of care are the same persons who would qualify for admission to a Home for the Aged. For those who wish to avoid an institutional environment and atmosphere, it provides an alternative. At the same time the close connection with a Home for the Aged eases the transition from normal home life to life in the Home.

Initially the Province will pay 50% of the cost of room and board in carefully selected homes to the responsible municipality, up to a total maximum of $30.00 per month.

The special-home care plan is another step forward in more humane provision for our senior citizens.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF BRANCH

• • • • • • Director's Report

Public Assistance in Ontario in the fiscal year 1955-1956 was granted to a considerable number of persons in Ontario who were in necessitous circumstances and thus required financial aid under the provisions of The Unemployment Relief Act and its regulations.

With only a few exceptions, such assistance is issued in the form of cash on a monthly basis. This has proven by experience and study to be the most advantageous system of providing aid both from the recipients' and the administrative viewpoint.

In the organized municipalities, assistance is administered by the municipal officials, being shared by the Province on a 50-50 basis. Such assistance includes food, fuel, clothing, shelter, household sundries and physicians' services.

In unorganized areas, assistance is administered under the supervision of the Provincial Welfare Administrators, the cost being fully paid by the Province.

Medical

Persons in receipt of Unemployment Relief Assistance receive the services of free medical aid from the physician of their own choice either in the home or doctor's office. Each family or person receives a monthly identification voucher for presentation to the doctor. Payment of accounts payable to the doctor are processed for payment through the Medical Welfare Plan of the Ontario Medical Association and the Province of Ontario.

Accounts

Of the 932 organized municipalities in the Province of Ontario, accounts under The Unemployment Relief Act were received from 714, being 76.6%.

Of the 29 cities, all submitted accounts. Out of 310 towns and villages, 226 submitted accounts, or 72.9%.

Of 593 townships, 459 submitted accounts, or 77.4%.

In the previous year, of 930 municipalities, 90.2% rendered accounts, whereas in the year 1955-56 there was a decrease of 13.6%.

The gross expenditure for the year was 6,900,576.00, the Province contributing 3,665,337, and the municipalities 3,235,239. The increase over the preceding year was 645,867, being 10.3%.

Supplementary Assistance

Where there are extenuating circumstances, the Branch has continued the granting of supplementary assistance in conjunction with the municipalities to persons in receipt of Old Age Assistance, Old Age Security or Disabled Persons' Allowances as a relief measure to a maximum of $10.00 per month.

In unorganized areas, payment is made in full by the Province. While Supplementary Aid has increased Direct Relief expenditures, such assistance has been of considerable help to persons requiring same.

The amounts paid for supplementary assistance and shelter expenditures are presently under review with the object of increasing such allowances.

Age Group 65-70 and Over

During the month of March 1956, 25,803 persons received assistance. Of these, there were 425 persons between the ages of 65 and 69, whereas in March 1955, there were 484 persons. In the age group 70 years and over there were 131 persons against 132 in March 1955. This latter group were not eligible for Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security chiefly because they lacked the necessary residence qualifications.

Incapacitation Allowances

A maximum of $50.00 per month plus medical services was granted to persons coming within this category. Later, if warranted, transfer of cases was made to Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security when reaching age requirements.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms, legs, and braces have been supplied to persons requiring them, the cost to municipalities being shared on a 50-50 basis, with the Province paying the full cost in unorganized areas.

There has been a considerable saving of public funds by the providing of these appliances which enable these persons, where possible, to become self-sustaining, or to assist in home duties.

The various municipalities are becoming more conversant with this form of aid. Consequently it is being used to good advantage by all those requiring this type of service.

Rehabilitation

Where it is deemed necessary after the supplying of Prosthetic appliances, rehabilitation is followed through either with the Disabled Persons' Allowances and Rehabilitation Services Branch by providing a course, or, if not coming within their regulations, the person may be granted a course and maintenance under The Unemployment Relief Regulations.

Follow-up is made to assist the person on completion of his training to obtain gainful occupation, so he may not require further social assistance.

Considerable success in this enterprise has been obtained through the above procedure over a period of years.

Desertions

Constant attention has been given to the matter of desertions. The problem of locating the heads of families who applied for aid because they had been deserted received special consideration during the year. Through the co-operative efforts of provincial and municipal authorities a reasonable number of these absconding persons was located. As a result through court action, reconciliations and other adjustments, a considerable number was removed from the Relief rolls.

Taking into consideration the increased population of over 150,000, there has been a reduction in aid to persons coming within this category.

Transportation

Financial assistance covering transportation costs has been paid to municipalities where the head of a family has been returned to his place of residence.

Inter-provincial transportation costs have also been shared with the municipalities in returning a person or family to other provinces where they have residence following negotiations with them. A considerable number of cases come within this category each year.

Economic Report

Reports of inestimable value are received quarterly from the District Administrators and Supervisors showing the various economic trends in the Province.

General Welfare

As in previous years, this branch has received numerous requests from municipalities, other Provinces, welfare agencies, and other departments of the Provincial Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to welfare.

Referrals forwarded to the District Welfare Administrators and Supervisors received prompt attention, especially where investigations were required to alleviate hardship.

To the municipal officials we extend our sincere thanks and appreciation for their co-operation and assistance in rendering aid to persons in necessitous circumstances.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

· · · · · · · Director's Repo

The First Annual Report of the Minister of Public Welfare (1930-1931) records that "During the year the Province was divided into inspectoral areas and a staff of inspectors organized." A quarter of a century later it seems timely to reflect upon the vast change through which the 157 persons on staff March 31, 1956, have become recognized throughout the Province for their services.

We read in the same Report of the first inspectors through whose efforts "... many persons not legally entitled to pension have been discovered and their names removed from the list." As in the early days of the Department, the discovery of applicants "not legally entitled" remains a valid function of the field staff. However, the only form of categorical aid requiring an investigation relative to the applicant's social and economic conditions at first was Mothers' Allowances. Now they relate to four major welfare programmes: Mothers' Allowances, Blind Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance, and Disabled Persons' Allowances. Along with the increased work responsibilities attendant upon the development of new programmes of assistance, an increasing emphasis has been placed on the service given by the Field Worker to the individual applicant for or recipient of public assistance.

This progressive trend toward more intensive service by the Welfare Field Workers, coupled with the expanding functions of the District Welfare Administrators and Supervisors, has, no doubt, been a substantial factor in establishing a wider recognition throughout the Province for the decentralized approach to service. The 17 District Welfare Offices throughout the Province are rapidly becoming well-integrated units working in close liaison with the various Branches of the Department of Public Welfare in the Parliament Buildings.

Each welfare field worker is responsible for making periodic visits to a group of cases currently in receipt of an allowance. In addition, there are visits to the many new applicants for the various forms of assistance. Each field worker's unit of responsibility is referred to as a "caseload". The average caseload throughout the Province during the fiscal year was 391 cases. With the number of Field Workers remaining relatively constant, it would appear that continued industrial expansion is the vital factor in keeping caseloads uniform.

A second Conference for all Administrators and Supervisors of the 17 District Offices and senior administrative staff of the Department was held in the Parliament Buildings. Such a Conference provides an excellent opportunity for both participation and learning by both Head Office and Field Staff alike. It also permits the Administrators and Supervisors to share with each other the various methods and techniques evolved to meet the peculiar requirements of each District.

Worthy of note is that the panel discussions on "Forms and Files in Local Offices" identified a need for a review of current practices. This review should have as its chief goal a uniform approach to the work throughout the 17 Districts.

Attention has been focused on selective recruitment by the Personnel Division of the Department with stress on training of new employees. The number of positions in the Department has remained constant at 421 for both the months March, 1955, and March, 1956.

Because of a variety of reasons replacements were necessary in 81 professional and clerical positions. There has been an adjustment to a small degree in the type of position held by members of the staff with a decrease in numbers occupied solely in clerical work. Many new employees with professional training are utilized in Child Welfare, Medical, Rehabilitation, Research and Field Services.

In-Service Programme

Continuing emphasis is being placed on the quality of persons recruited for field offices. The Department utilized an extended In-Service-Training programme preceding the assignment of Field Workers to the District Offices. During the year 34 field workers received this training. Prior to probationary appointment and training, qualification as to eligibility must be obtained through satisfactory completion of an entrance examination. This recruitment policy and staff development programme are producing a more competent staff. The measures now in effect are securing qualified field staff to meet the Department's requirements.

The Civil Service Commission, as a result of these more positive recruitment and staff training policies, has established higher salary ranges which compare more than favourably with those effective elsewhere in Canada and the United States. Previous difficulty in securing and maintaining suitable personnel has diminished because of these changed policies.

Head Office Staff

No Government Department can function properly without a highly integrated Head Office staff. The administration of programmes within the Department is a demanding task. In Branches concerned with the direct granting of funds to individuals there is great detail and responsibility required of those in every classification. The clerical staffs in their many occupations must perform their individual duties expeditiously and accurately. Essentially there can be little room for error or lack of knowledge in the specific duties of each member of the staff. The internal staff who are responsible for such important services are performing their work creditably. Because of careful placement, competent direction and supervision the staff has performed its work with efficiency and economy.

In the Department of Public Welfare females outnumber the males by 145, the staff being 67.22% female and 32.78% male. It should be mentioned that married women on our staff in many instances are performing indispensable services. The ages of members of the staff as a whole show much balance and are noted in the table below.

Employment hazards which occasion bodily harm are not anticipated in employment which relates to serving needy persons. However, unexpected injuries are encountered by a number engaged in Field Services each year because their work requires that they be outdoors in all seasons of the year under all types of weather conditions. While Workmen's Compensation benefits are available to members of the staff who are involved in accidents the majority endure the mishaps without long absences from their duties. Six field workers received compensation as a consequence of falls or accidents with motor vehicles.

Distribution of Staff

The distribution of staff is related to four general forms of service: administrative, supervisory, investigational and clerical. The implementation of the legislation of the Department necessitates a large staff located at the Parliament Buildings. To serve these operating Branches a further portion of staff is employed under the direct supervision of seventeen District Welfare Offices. The following table indicates the number of staff (professional and clerical) employed by location, as of March 31, 1956.

Excellent communication has been maintained between the administrative Branches and the 17 District Field Offices. The annual Supervisors' Conference held in November, 1955, continued to promote understanding and co-operation between the various offices in dealing with their problems.

The staff of the Department was fortunate in that no loss in numbers was incurred through superannuation or death during the year.

Other Personnel Activities

The personnel division is engaged in a number of activities beyond recruitment, training and placement of new employees. There is a large amount of detailed administrative work in connection with the personnel records of each present and past employee. The details of employment, supervisory assessments, medical records, transfers, promotions, reclassification, salaries, termination of employment and sick leave bonuses have all been carefully maintained.

Province-wide newspaper advertising of positions has greatly increased the number of applicants for positions. A corresponding amount of time has been devoted to interviewing applicants at various centres throughout the Province. Educational leave and special leaves of absence all must be treated individually. Although total personnel has remained constant due to administrative restrictions and refinements, the work required in classification and revision of salaries was continued unabated.

Departmental Council

In February the personnel office completed arrangements for nomination and election of staff representation to the Departmental Council which now consists of two staff representatives and two appointed by the Minister. The Departmental Council meets regularly each month and provides a means of treating extraordinary problems presented by staff members.

The Department of Public Welfare acknowledges with thanks the aid and direction given by the Civil Service Commission and others on many matters of personnel policy and practice affecting its staff.

THE

FISCAL YEAR 1955-56

THE HON. LOUIS P. CECILE, Minister of Public Welfare, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

SIR:

I have the honour to report on the operation of the Soldiers' Aid Commission and Ontario Canteen Fund for the fiscal year 1955-56. While the Ontario Government does not provide any of the funds at the disposal of the Canteen Fund, it does supply quarters. The administrative staff of the Commission and the Secretary of the O.C.F. overlap.

Attached will be found-

- (a) Auditor's Report—Soldiers' Aid Commission.
- (b) Auditor's Report—Ontario Canteen Fund.

To secure a true perspective of the operation of the two funds it is necessary to consider the work of the administrative staff.

By personal contacts with members of the medical and dental professions, the suppliers of books, furniture, optical needs, wheel chairs, artificial limbs, finance companies, contractors and services, liquidation of accounts of persons in distress at reduced rates is made possible. This, of course, contributes tremendously to the conservation of the funds at our disposal.

By the same token, the co-operation of all other sources of funds available for the assistance of ex-servicemen and women and their dependents relieves the strain on our Funds and it is sometimes impossible to say in whose office the investigation and administrative work was done. It can be said, however, that because of the co-operation and understanding between the staffs of the various funds the ex-serviceman or woman in distress is helped to a far greater extent than would be possible if this co-operation did not exist.

Even this does not show the true picture as the staff of the two funds are giving advice to ex-servicemen and women in cases where they do not qualify for monetary assistance. I wish to stress particularly that no person is turned away without assistance. In cases where the applicant does not qualify under our regulations he is directed to the appropriate source.

Many cases of the supply of clothing, wheel chairs, school books and other necessities are often arranged by our staff at no cost to the funds.

On behalf of my fellow Commissioners, I express appreciation of the assistance rendered by the investigators of your Department, Sir.

Respectfully submitted,

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER

To: The Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Q.C., Minister of Public Welfare.

A basic pattern of welfare services has been gradually forged in Ontario and should lead to the removal of almost every type of distress requiring financial support. Current welfare trends are mainly directed to expansion and refinements in the welfare programs.

Ontario, in 1956, enjoyed its finest year in both growth and achievements. The standard of living of its people was at its highest level. Economic records of every type were broken.

Towards the end of 1957, business conditions showed a decline in activity, with employment opportunities being less brisk. This hesitation in the rapid upward trend during the past number of years is believed to be only a temporary condition. All signs point to greater records of success for residents of Ontario.

There has been a progressive recognition, during the past quarter century, towards serving the requirements of persons on an individual basis. Not the least of these are the personal services which do not reflect the funds required by individuals and families.

General Welfare Assistance

Within the past year, several important services have been sponsored and advanced by the Department of Public Welfare. One of the most important of these was the signing of the Unemployment Assistance Agreement which brought about a financial partnership with the Federal Government. The new terms of the Federal legislation, effective January 1st, 1958, removed the invidious distinction between employable and unemployable persons. It is now possible to provide funds for a wider range of services for needy persons who cannot qualify under the special programs.

The Province, together with the Federal Government and the municipalities. now shares in the cost of assistance to persons for whom the municipalities were previously wholly responsible. These include: employable persons without jobs; those who are unable to accept employment; patients or residents in nursing homes; and persons who require assistance in the form of post-sanatorium care. In all likelihood, advanced welfare treatment will be made available for needy immigrants and Indians under the new General Welfare Assistance Act.

Distribution of Welfare Expenditures

Based on a per capita of population, the cost of providing welfare services under Ontario legislation was $6.90 during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1957. This is representative of the total costs reported to the Department during the course of the year—namely—$37,999,091. The distribution of these expenditures is outlined below.

Old Age Assistance	$9,447,466
Blind Persons' Allowances	822,165
Disabled Persons' Allowances	3,715,914
Mothers' Allowances	6,985,587
Homes or the Aged	2,478,046

It should be further stated that a sharp decline was noted in the per capita of population cost for municipalities during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1957. For the previous year this cost was $1.64 while for the current period the cost was $1.30.

The following table shows how the major share of welfare expenditures is absorbed by the Province.

Provincial	$23,082,532	61.9
Federal	7,198,314	19.3
Municipal	7,018,245	18.8

Beyond relieving municipalities of their costs for welfare services in this direct way, the municipalities collectively received from the Province $12,693,908 in the form of unconditional grants during the same period. The purpose of these municipal grants is noted in the Schedule to The Municipal Unconditional Grants Act as follows:

"To assist each municipality in Ontario in the provision of welfare and social services, including indigent and unemployment relief, hospitalization and institutional care costs and other services for its inhabitants..."

Unemployment and Public Works

Elsewhere in this report welfare programs under provincial jurisdiction are shown together with the basis of expenditure. Distress caused by unemployment has an effect upon all programs operated by the Department. Unfavourable economic conditions add problems in relation to the services for children, the handicapped and elderly persons.

Borderline employment cases are also seriously affected while the able and willing employable person frequently requires aid from the local municipality in addition to unemployment insurance benefits. White unemployment invariably presents insecurity to individuals. Unemployment Insurance is the major bulwark against this hazard. Even in the best of times poetets of unemployment develop and, of course, seasonal unemployment is a chronic condition for many persons during the several months of winter. It is known that a great backlog of necessary public works exists. In fact, at the most recent Federal-Provincial Conference in 1957, Ontario's Prime Minister informed the delegates that during the next 20 years $11,125,000,000 would be required in the form of public capital investment.

With the great growth of the economy in Ontario, it seems evident that a public investment program will continue without abatement. It sometimes happens, of course, that there will be a surplus of labour in an area where the need for public works is minimal. Other areas have to proceed with projects although unemployment is not considered to be a major factor in such places. It is certain, however, that there are types of projects which could be undertaken in many areas to provide jobs and accomplish desirable results.

In the event that the three levels of government decided to embark on a scheme of public works projects, the sharing of expenditures would make it necessary to formulate interlocking administrative policies. These would relate to the types of acceptable projects, the conditions under which grants would be made and the procedures for utilizing the unemployed.

For the future, in consideration of public works as a device to relieve unemployment, it might be appropriate if the Federal Government sponsored a Federal-Provincial Public Works Council to study and recommend the methods and means of developing such measures. This Council should function on a continuing basis and with representation from each province. A permanent body would accomplish much in creating a reserve of suitable public works projects in keeping with the needs of the respective provinces and municipalities.

The Older Worker and Forced Retirement

The treatment of older persons 65 years and over, particularly those willing and able to continue in employment, is a major concern of the public at large. At this stage of our development, the population over 65 is increasing at twice the rate of the overall population rise. In the course of the next 15 years, the 65 and over group will likely be in the ratio of 1 to 10. At the beginning of the century the ratio was 1 to 25.

In the following table we may see how the average length of life has increased from ancient to modern times.

Early Iron and Bronze Age, Greece	.18	years
About 2,000 years ago, Rome	.22	. 77
Middle Ages, England	.32	. 57
1687-1691, Germany	35
Before 1789, United States	.38	27
1838-1854, England and Wales	.42	22
1900-1902, United States	.47	22
1953, United States

There is no halting this upward trend in the length of the life span. Today. Ontario's population in the age group 65 years and over is approximately 454,000; but we anticipate that by 1975 there will be 627,000 such persons. The arbitrary process of retiring persons at the artificial age of 65 years is occurring at an increasing rate. Today, the older worker is one of the most certain victims of discrimination. His employment is frequently halted without regard to his ability or his wishes and despite the fact that experts in the field of gerontology are quite unable to answer the question: "When does old age begin?"

The bias operating against the older worker was highlighted in a study in the United States which found that 56% of the older workers retired because company policies compelled them to do so. Possibly one-half of all forced retirements occur because private pension plans are assisting in the process of the removal of these persons from jobs. The employment of older workers, even at the age of 45 years, is steeped in prejudice. The larger the firm the more restrictive the hiring practices. "Family operated businesses", and most certainly the smaller firms, are generally found to be more understanding of their employees at the older age levels.

The older worker is, of course, unable to protect himself where social responsibility on the part of industry is lacking. Large plants, with 1,000 employees or more, seem to be determined to place the older person on a shelf. This still occurs despite a statement of associations of manufacturers and business that: "The value of the productive capacity of the oldster has been grossly underestimated."

Little thought has been given to the loss of production and the high economic cost in sidelining older persons able and willing to continue in employment. The productive skills of older persons are frequently ignored because of the personnel policies of some employers in arbitrarily retiring their workers at a given age level.

The cost of removing all competent and willing older workers would reach staggering proportions. A study in Great Britain pointed to a per capita public expenditure 3½ times greater for the elderly than for the active population. Some authorities predict that the average age at death will be 75 years for men and 80 years for women in the next 10 years.

Such a prediction poses many questions and problems related to the care of a large segment of the population. Economic, social and health problems are all involved and must be considered, not only for the present, but for the future.

Retirement, forced or voluntary, can be a blessing if useful activities can be developed by the individual. Much is yet to be accomplished by persons in their middle years to prepare themselves for retirement. Of all the universal anxieties, the fear of aging is foremost. In its trail it raises problems of unemployment, ill health, loss of family and friends and that most insidious scourge of all, loneliness. In many cases, it is a period of utter boredom and frustration. The most positive antidote for these "diseases" of old age, in a large number of instances, is, of course, to continue in employment. Certainly, it would be most desirable if the individual was given the privilege to remain at his job beyond the period when he might normally be expected to retire, if he is physically and mentally capable and desires to do so. It is imperative that all members of our society retain their sense of value and dignity.

Governor Averill Harriman of the State of New York has aptly said:

"I always feel that when we talk of problems of the aging, employment comes first — because enforced idleness is at the root of so many of the other difficulties that beset older people."

At the present time only 4% of all males in the Labour Force are 65 years of age and over, whereas almost 40% of the men who are recorded as "not in the Labour Force" are in the same age group. It should be noted that "persons not in the Labour Force" include those who are 14 years of age and over who live in the community — not in institutions of any kind. Stated another way, only about 10% of all the males who are in the non-working part of the population are recorded as being "permanently unable or too old to work"; while about 44% are stated to be "retired or voluntarily idle". According to a United States publication in March, 1955 (and Canadian experience is believed to be similar) after 65 years of age, a man has only one chance in fifty of securing a job.

The one positive requirement of older persons is to obtain sufficient financial support. Many should be given an equal opportunity to continue in gainful employment. It seems certain, however, that some inducement beyond sentiment must be considered if meaningful measures are to be undertaken towards this end.

It is thus proposed that a premium could be extended to firms and businesses through The Corporation's Tax Act in the form of a tax credit where a stated percentage of persons 65 years and over are retained on their payrolls or engaged or re-hired for work.

The tax credit might be made available to any firm or business employing persons 65 years and over in excess of 4 per cent of their normal monthly payroll. For example, where a company employs an average of 1,000 persons monthly, the tax credit would apply where 40 or more older workers were on the payroll. I submit that a suitable schedule of tax credits could be readily designed for this purpose. The benefits to the individual, industry, and to the economy as a whole, would undoubtedly prove to be substantial.

It may be that industry, through a corporation tax credit, would welcome this equalizing measure in the employment of older persons. Today, more elderly people are enjoying good health than ever before and their endurance has been discounted beyond reason.

Government revenues could not possibly decline when reviewed in the light of an increase in the national product, purchasing power and revenues by way of sales and income taxes.

Medical Aspects of Aging

There are many elderly persons who require specialized types of care and services. As a subject, the care of the aged is a large one. Reference has been made to the willing and suitable older worker. Financial support, by means of allowances, meets the needs of many cases and permits normal living arrangements in the community. Others need the kind of care and attention which is provided in homes for the aged or nursing homes. The problem of ill health among some elderly persons is, of course, of major concern. They require a much greater proportion of medical services than any other age group in the population.

Concentrated efforts are required to explore the various aspects of aging, and particularly medical disorders related to older persons. Aside from distress, unhappiness and concern which ill health brings, the cost of medical and hospital care is a tremendous community problem. It is apparent that continuing research into the health problems of elderly persons must be emphasized. Toward this end a Committee headed by the Department's Consultant in Geriatrics, Dr. W. W. Priddle, is undertaking extensive studies into the physical and mental processes of aging. An outstanding doctor in this field, Dr. C. Keith Stuart, has been engaged on a full-time basis to assure continuity in these studies. The Committee will have at its disposal all necessary laboratory facilities. The medical profession, among others, will be informed, from time to time, of the findings of the Committee.

A New Community Service

With the introduction of The Homemakers and Nurses Services Act, an important step has been taken towards giving service and care to a large group of persons and families within their own homes. Homemakers will serve on a temporary basis to carry out necessary household tasks. The services of trained nurses on a visitation basis will provide for the specialized requirements of the aged, handicapped and others who can be cared for at home.

The Care of Children

Notable improvements have been made in the programs relating to children. In particular, mothers' allowances cases now receive assistance on a budgetary basis geared to the needs of the household. The budgetary method replaces the former flat rate grants. A substantial increase in the average monthly payment per case has been noted. In January, 1958, the average allowance was $104.00, in comparison with $85.00 in 1957. In passing, it should be noted that fully one-half of these families have income from outside sources, including that from part-time employment.

The mothers' allowances program is now administered through the 17 Regional Offices of the Department rather than through the Central Office in Toronto. The attention given to these families has been decidedly improved in relation to the personal requirements of individual cases and in facilitating the payment of allowances.

In Ontario, some 10,000 children under 18 years of age are permanent wards of Children's Aid Societies. The majority of these children have been placed in foster homes. Infants are usually readily adopted; but a large number of older and handicapped children remain in the care of Societies as a charge on the municipalities and the Province.

In an effort to find suitable adoptive parents for these children, the Department has a campaign underway, utilizing newspapers and radio. We are of the opinion that a home can be found for every adoptable child. A Central Adoption Registry has been in operation for several years to serve prospective parents. The results have been productive in placing many children in permanent homes and, of course, this is continuing. Constant attention must be devoted to those children who lack the security and affection which only a permanent home and family can provide.

The Children's Aid Societies of Ontario are giving effective services in the treatment of family difficulties. There is a wise reluctance on the part of the Societies to accept children in care where there is a reasonable hope that parental responsibility can be strengthened and retained, or where other measures can be developed to keep children in their own homes. It is evident that the family circle is unequalled in giving security to all its members.

Some of the more complicated cases involve the desertion of the parent. Marital problems are the concern of all authorities having responsibility for children.

Conclusion

I should say that this report, which is filed annually by yourself, provides one of the most complete records of the services of a Government Department. Included are not only financial and statistical data, but also the comments of the Directors of the various Branches. Considerable care is taken to give an accurate statement of activities so that its value as a permanent record of accomplishments may be assured.

There is now every evidence that a contributory social security scheme will be realized in the not too distant future. With the existing Old Age Security program for persons 70 years of age and over, it is likely that a "double-decker" security plan will be used. The contributory scheme would undoubtedly give wider coverage to the families without a breadwinner and the disabled, as well as to elderly persons. When this additional measure becomes effective, it is anticipated that welfare payments from public taxing sources will diminish. Preliminary studies within the Department would lead us to believe that a contributory social security scheme is a necessary and desirable part of our economic structure. It would be well within the ability of wage-earners and employers to support such a plan.

It is probable that, in the course of a year, upwards of 400,000 persons are treated, directly or indirectly, within the total legislative program of the Department. This, of course, means that the staff of the Department is called upon to maintain maximum services covering a wide range of persons and problems. Exceptional efforts are being made to refine the processes in establishing eligibility for services, particularly towards eliminating unnecessary paper work. We would estimate, in this latter area, that many thousands of hours of staff time have been saved.

The staff of the Department is well balanced — including a good distribution in the ages of the personnel. I am grateful for their loyal support of the legislative program and their ever-willing efforts in giving services without delay to the individuals referred to our Department for services. The municipal welfare administrators and the staffs of the private agencies are, in their own right, effectively maintaining complementary services in co-operation with the Province. The senior officials of the Department, who assume responsibility for the administration of the legislation, are invaluable in their devotion to their tasks.

JAS. S. BAND,

Deputy Minister.

AND BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Assistance to needy persons in the 65-69 year age group continued to be provided under the Old Age Assistance Act, 1951, up to a limit of $40 a month, and shared on a 50-50 basis with the federal government. Maximum permissible income (including assistance) remained at $720 a year for single persons and $1200 for married persons.

The number of applications received during the year, totalled 6,515 (a decrease of almost 12% compared with 1955-56). During the same period, 7,183 applications were brought to a conclusion. Of these, 83% were approved and assistance granted, 13.9% were declined for various reasons (the chief reason being that income exceeded the permissible maximum); 2.2% of the applications were withdrawn and the remainder (less than 1%) were closed because of the death of applicants. Proportionately more persons were granted assistance at age 65 than in the previous year (56.2% as against 51.9% of the applicants).

Because of the large number of recipients who are transferred at age 70 to Old Age Security each year (5,249 during 1956-57), the old age assistance caseload has remained relatively stable. The number of recipients at the fiscal year end (20,744) was equal to approximately 12.4% of the estimated population in the 65-69 year age group as compared with 13.3% at March 31, 1956.

Total payments for old age assistance during the year came to approximately $9,464,000 paid to an average of 21,141 persons a month. Almost 79% of the recipients received the maximum payment of $40 a month, and the average payment per person during March, 1957, was $36.93.

Blind Persons' Allowances

Blind persons in the 18-69 year age group continued to receive allowances up to $40 a month. Maximum permissible income (including the allowance) remained at $960 a year for a single person, $1560 a year for a married person living with a spouse who was not blind and $1680 a year for a married person whose spouse also was blind.

Total expenditures for allowances during 1956-57 amounted to almost $822,000, the province paying 25% and the federal government, 75%. These payments were made to an average of 1,721 persons a month. Of all recipients, 93% received the maximum monthly allowance of $40, whereas the average payment per person during March, 1957, was $39.09.

During the year, 315 applications for the allowance were dealt with. Two out of every three applicants were granted the allowance. Of those not approved, approximately 33% of applicants had income in excess of the permissible maximum and almost 60% could not be certified as being blind within the definition of blindness under the Blind Persons Act (Canada). (The Blindness Control Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare determines eligibility in regard to blindness).

Medical Care

All persons (except patients in hospitals for the mentally ill) who were recipients of old age assistance and blind persons' allowances and certain old age security pensioners had available to them free medical care, consisting of home and office calls, under a continuing agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association.

Based on a flat payment of $1.05 a month for each recipient, the provincial expenditure for these services, to which the federal government does not contribute, amounted to almost $1,300,000 during 1956-57 for these three groups of persons. This expenditure covered an average of 103,066 persons a month — this total being made up of 20,252 recipients of old age assistance, 1,599 recipients of a blind persons' allowance and 81,215 old age security pensioners. The same coverage was also extended to other programs as can be seen from the assistance chart.

DISABLED PERSONS ALLOWANCES AND REHABILITATION SERVICES

Allowances, up to $40 a month, were made available to an increasing number of persons who were totally and permanently disabled within the meaning of the Disabled Persons Act (Canada). The allowances were paid to disabled persons who were at least 18 years of age and whose income (including the allowance) did not exceed $720 a year for single persons and $1200 a year for married persons.

Total expenditures for allowances, shared on a 50-50 basis with the federal government, amounted to $3,715,443 during 1956-57, and the average payment per person during March, 1957, was $39.27. In addition, an expenditure of $98,571 was made by the Province for the provision of medical care to recipients, under an agreement with the Ontario Medical Association which administers the Medical Welfare Plan.

At the beginning of the fiscal year, 7,501 persons were in receipt of the allowance. The caseload increased to a total of 8,065 recipients (an increase of 7.5%) by the end of the fiscal year. During the year, the applications of 3,020 persons were dealt with, of which 1,575 (52%) were approved and allowances granted. Approximately 39% (1,170) of the applicants were declined, and of these, more than 85% of the applicants were not eligible for the allowance because they could not be certified as totally and permanently disabled.

In the statistical tables which follow, the various data compiled for the fiscal year April 1, 1956 to March 31, 1957 is compared with the data covering the period July 1, 1952 to March 31, 1956.

Rehabilitation Services

The program under The Rehabilitation Services Act has been in operation for ten months of this fiscal year. The Act has the major purpose of developing and restoring the ability of physically and mentally handicapped men and women to productive work. To achieve this end, counselling, vocational training and maintenance allowances are extended to handicapped persons.

During this period, 298 applications for service were received. Some 233 handicapped persons were provided with counselling and training to prepare them for employment in keeping with their physical and mental disabilities. Only five persons were found to be ineligible for assistance, while a number of others were helped through direct job placement without training.

Rehabilitation work at an early stage is widely practised in Ontario Sanatoria with patients suffering from tuberculosis. It is not surprising.

therefore, that the largest single disability group was tuberculous, with approximately 60% of applicants reporting this disability. The remaining applicants suffered from a great variety of handicapping disabilities, such as arthritis, cerebral palsy, cardiac conditions, paraplegia, visual defects, mental illness and many others.

About 40% had never gone beyond public school, while only 19% had better than grade 10 education. With few exceptions, applicants were unemployed and dependent upon public assistance or, in some cases, on friends and relatives. They came from all parts of the Province. In the majority of instances, they were referred by public and private health and welfare organizations actively engaged in rehabilitation work.

As a substantial number of students commenced training during the latter part of the year, the great majority were still attending training courses at its conclusion. However, it was both encouraging and gratifying to find that 77 had completed or discontinued training and that 49 of these (63.6%) were employed. Clerical occupations, such as stenography, bookkeeping and business machine operating, provided the greatest number of employment opportunities. Technical and skilled trades, such as radio, television and electrical equipment repair, welding, drafting and hairdressing, also accounted for a substantial number of placements.

There remained 28 who were not employed at the end of the year. Only six of those were too severely handicapped to benefit from their training. Two gave up their course to be married, while 8 were undergoing further medical treatment before returning to training. Twelve were awaiting employment, the majority of whom are now employed.

In order to make it possible for handicapped persons to attend courses of training, the full cost of tuition is paid in all cases. If necessary, the cost of transportation and maintenance allowances of from $60.00 to $130.00 per month are provided.

Two-thirds of our trainees actually required assistance in meeting the cost of daily living. A total expenditure of $89,064 was made for tuition, maintenance and transportation. These costs are shared equally with the Federal Government under the terms of Schedule "R" of the Vocational Training Co-ordination Act.

In assessing the effect of the programme, it must be kept in mind that this is only a preliminary report of a new and developing service. The task has proven to be a complex and challenging one, since many of the trainees have serious social and physical problems and limited skills and aptitudes upon which to build a framework for rehabilitation plans. Frequently, joint efforts with a number of other private and public organizations have been required. The results, to date, however, have been most encouraging. There is ample evidence that, with the continued co-operation of the many private organizations in the rehabilitation field, an increasing number of persons can look forward to benefiting from this opportunity to become independent, self-supporting citizens.

MOTHERS' AND DEPENDENT

CHILDREN'S ALLOWANCES

Financial aid, amounting to $6,985,225 was provided by the Province to families for the maintenance of dependent children in their own homes or in foster homes, during the fiscal year 1956-57. At the end of March, 1957, there were 7,418 families receiving the allowance on behalf of 17,309 dependent children. The average allowance during that month was $86.61. An additional expenditure of $308,137 was made to provide medical services for these families under the Medical Welfare Plan.

In over one-half the total cases (57.5%) the allowance was granted because the mother was widowed and in 23.1% of the families, the father was incapacitated and could not support his family. Desertion of the mother and children was the cause of financial dependency in 10.2% of the cases. Thus, death, incapacity and, to a lesser extent, desertion were the main reasons why an allowance was necessary. In 38.8% of the total number of families receiving the allowance there was only one dependent child. The number of families with two children comprised 25.6% of the total and 16.7% had three children. The remainder ranged from four to eleven dependent children.

During the year, a total of 2,414 applications for the allowance were brought to a conclusion, of which 1,422 (58.9%) were approved, and allowances granted. The remainder were declined for various reasons. In 78.2% of the cases where an allowance was granted during the year, financial aid was sought because of the death, incapacity, or desertion of the father.

The provisions under the Mothers' Allowances Act in regard to the monthly amount of the allowance and to the system of a flat rate of allowance related to the number of dependents in a family, remained unchanged. However, the Act was amended, with effect from March 28, 1956, to permit an allowance to be granted a mother with dependent children born out of wedlock. To be eligible for the allowance, the unwed mother must have cared for and maintained her child for a period of two years following the birth of the child. At March 31, 1957, there were 133 such cases.

Provision was also made to permit an allowance to be granted to a permanently unemployable father where the mother is deceased or is absent from the home for a period of at least six months and the father is caring for his dependent children. Applications from twenty such incapacitated fathers were received during the fiscal year and eleven were granted an allowance.

CHILD WELFARE

During 1956, 55 private and locally autonomous Children's Aid Societies operated under The Child Welfare Act and 47 private institutions served children and unmarried mothers under The Charitable Institutions Act. It is the principal function of the Child Welfare Branch to advise, supervise and inspect these societies and institutions. It administers financial grants in support of the various programmes either directly to the organization or through rebates to the municipalities responsible for maintenance charges.

It is essential for the mental health of the child that he experience normal and continuous relationships with the members of his own family in which all experience true satisfaction. These relationships are applicable even in the case of bad parents, but being appropriate only within the family, they cannot be fully duplicated in any other environment. Dr. John Bowlby in his report of a study conducted for the World Health Organization emphasized this when he said:

"It must never be forgotten that even the bad parent who neglects her child is nevertheless providing much for him. Except in the worst cases, she is giving him food and shelter, comforting him in distress, teaching him simple skills, and above all is providing him with that continuity of human care on which his sense of security rests. He may be ill fed and ill sheltered, he may be very dirty and suffering from disease, he may be ill treated, but unless his parents have wholly rejected him, he is secure in the knowledge that there is someone to whom he is of value and who will strive, even though inadequately, to provide for him until such time as he can fend for himself."

The security, independence and good citizenship of the individual depend on sound mental health. The efforts of the Children's Aid Societies are directed towards its continuous development in those children who may be considered neglected under The Child Welfare Act. The principal emphasis is placed by the Societies, of course, on services which will make it possible for children to continue to benefit from the human relationships in their own homes.

In some homes, unfortunately, dangers to the safety and welfare of children exceed any possible benefit. In such cases, Societies must move the children affected to specially selected foster homes where they will receive proper care, develop appropriate relationships, and gain a sound sense of security and improved mental health.

For these children who can live comfortably in a normal family but who cannot return to their own homes, every effort is made regardless of age.

creed or colour to find suitable adoption homes. Failing this, suitable permanent boarding homes are sought where they can enjoy a normal development. For those children with special needs who cannot live comfortably in a family home, every effort is made to secure placement in the appropriate institution operating under The Charitable Institutions Act. The charitable institutions offer a wide range of service. These services may extend from providing for the simple physical and educational needs of the normal child in a group setting to meeting the needs of the unmarried mother and the emotionally disturbed child in relatively specialized settings.

It is of great significance and of importance to note that (a) the number of children being cared for in institutions continues to fall despite the increasing population, (b) more and more institutions are transferring from the simple custodial care of normal children to caring for children with special needs, and (c) although the institutions determine their own admission policies, fifty per cent of children now in the care of institutions have been placed and are being maintained there by the Children's Aid Societies. These facts seem to indicate a developing unity of purpose—that of returning children to normal society either as members of their own families or as members of substitute families selected according to their needs.

In essence there exists a general acceptance of these basic principles both on the part of the Children's Aid Societies and an increasing number of institutions serving children. It may be predicted with confidence that, as the Societies and institutions through their respective associations — the Association of Children's Aid Societies and the Association of Institutions for Children and Youth — strive increasingly to blend their individual services into a harmonious, co-operative effort, the high objectives each group now seeks to attain on its own may all the sooner be realized.

Through legislative amendment, inspection, supervision, advice, and financial assistance, together with the provision of such special services as inter-Society adoption clearance and direct adoption advertising campaigns, the Province has encouraged and assisted development in keeping with the principles stated. That it is financially sound is indicated in that the proportion of tax revenue necessary to meet the demand of our child welfare services is also declining.

DAY NURSERIES

The fiscal year 1956-57 marks the tenth year of the licensing program in Ontario for day nurseries, nursery schools and private kindergartens. During this period 655 nurseries have been inspected and supervised by the branch, and 1,617 licences have been issued to nurseries meeting the required standards. In this way thousands of young children have been protected from unsuitable kinds of day care. Mothers who have been obliged to work have had the assurance that the experience of care away from home has been beneficial to their children. Persons operating nurseries have been helped to achieve a satisfactory program and have been protected from the unfair competition of sub-standard nurseries.

During this ten year period 355 nurseries have opened and closed again. In many instances these nurseries would have continued to operate in an unsatisfactory manner except for the provisions of the Day Nurseries Act. In reviewing the nurseries operating on March 31, 1957, it is noticed that 11% of these nurseries have been licensed for the entire ten years. Fifty-six per cent have been licensed for from five to ten years, and 84% for at least two years. During the past year only 8% of licensed nurseries closed, whereas 42% of the unlicensed nurseries closed. Thus we are evolving a permanent group of licensed nurseries giving service year after year, while there is a rapid turnover of nurseries which are below standard.

Children of Working Mothers

Many nurseries caring for the children of working mothers have now been in operation long enough to have had several years of continuous association with the families they serve. The staff has developed a deep respect for these working mothers who have cheerfully shouldered the double burden of bread-winner and homemaker. With the help of the nursery these mothers have given their children a happy home and an equal chance in life with children who have been fortunate enough to have the care of two parents.

Demonstration Nursery

An interesting feature of the past year's work was the demonstration nursery operated at the Department of Public Welfare Booth at the Canadian National Exhibition. Various day nurseries from Metropolitan Toronto sent groups of six children for two hour periods twice a day during the Exhibition. These children made themselves right at home in the miniature nursery play-room, and immediately occupied themselves with their usual nursery play activities, although separated from an interested public only by a row of potted plants. It was a rare opportunity to demonstrate the serene and busy atmosphere which is characteristic of a nursery.

Nursery for Hungarian Evacuees

The opening of the reception centre for Hungarian evacuees has also meant an unusual assignment for the staff of the branch. It was decided that some provision should be made for group care for the young children in the centre to free the parents to make the arrangements necessary to becoming part of their new country. A nursery program was operated in the reception centre beginning early in January, 1957. It was astonishing to see how quickly the children responded to the program despite language barriers. It was a very practical way of making both parents and children feel welcomed by Canadians. The co-operation of other government departments, the Canadian Red Cross Society, Ontario Division, and the Toronto Nursery Education Association was invaluable in carrying on this project.

Co-operative Nurseries

There continues to be increasing interest in the co-operative type of nursery, controlled and operated by the parents of the collider attendance. In at least half of the co-operatives, the mothers by reading and attendance at study groups fit themselves to participate in the program as assistants to the teachers. This plan has economic advantages, but its greatest contribution is the close relationship established between the home and the nursery.

The staff of the branch has found it very satisfying to note that most nursery operators are eager to improve their standards and methods. It is most gratifying to see the change in the children in a nursery when the program becomes one in which each child is encouraged to learn and create up to the limit of his ability. Frequently there has been a dramatic transformation from apathetic immature behaviour to a co-operative independent joyous attitude in the children.

Extent of Service

Nurseries of various types are now operating in 37 counties and districts and 85 municipalities in Ontario. The continued co-operation of local fire and health departments in inspecting these nurseries has contributed greatly to the value of the program.

HOMES FOR THE AGED

The year 1956 has been notable for the fact that more beds have been added during the year to municipally operated Homes for the Aged than in any other year since the original Homes for the Aged Act was introduced in 1949. 1,079 beds were added which means an increase of 21.8% over the number of beds of the previous year. It is also of interest to note that, in the eight years the Act has been in effect, the number of beds available in these Homes has been slightly more than doubled.

Four new Homes have been completed during the year of which two represented replacements, with increased and improved accommodation. Two of these were totally new and add to the growing number of Homes for the Aged.

During the same period six additions and extensions were made to existing buildings with a view to enlargement and improvement in the accommodation.

Seven complete new Homes are now under construction and also three additions and extensions to existing buildings. Plans are being drawn for a further three new Homes.

Four complete new Homes and three additions and extensions are being contemplated.

Emphasis has been given in these reports over past years to the general plan of providing proper facilities for the different types of care required by our elderly citizens in all Homes for the Aged. Some, who are ambulatory, require only ordinary normal care; others, who are bed-ridden or semi bed-ridden, require bed care. Still others require special care so that they may be fully protected. These are persons who are senile and have a tendency to wander away, but are not eligible for admission to an institution under The Mental Hospitals Act. Lastly married couples require joint accommodation.

This latter group comprises persons in segregated care in contrast to the congregate type of care provided persons in the older homes. Homes which do not provide the four classes of segregated care but only one or two types are said to be providing semi-segregated care.

In 1948, out of a total of 34 Homes, only 1 provided semi-segregated care. At the end of 1956, 17 provided segregated care and 5 semi-segregated care out of a total of 45 Homes.

Segregated care is more expensive, both in capital costs of new Homes and maintenance costs. It is less costly in consideration of the type of persons requiring care and probably more suitable accommodation than hospital care.

A great number of elderly people can be cared for in the community until they become bed-ridden, semi bed-ridden or senile. For these people the provision of bed care or special care facilities becomes a must. That is why all new Homes and many of the older Homes are being provided with greater facilities for serving persons in the four types of segregated care.

Special Home Care

Among the diversified services and accommodation available for elderly persons is Special Home Care, a program first introduced on July 1, 1955. This is an alternative to care in a Home for the Aged. Care in approved private homes in the community is provided for those who neither require bed care or special care and who prefer accommodation in a private home to that in an institutional setting. The local Home for the Aged assumes full responsibility for these people who must meet the requirements of admission of The Homes for the Aged Act. Thus, when these elderly folk can no longer be properly cared for in Special Care Homes they can be easily transferred to the Home for the Aged itself. The advantages of this plan of care, coordinated as it is with the Home for the Aged, are becoming better known throughout the Province. There has been, consequently, a slow but steady increase in the number of private homes being utilized.

Charitable Institutions

Complementing the care being given our elderly citizens in the municipally operated Homes for the Aged is that being given by private organizations in Homes known as Charitable Institutions. These are operated by religious, fraternal and other groups.

Their excellent work has been further encouraged during the year under review by an increase in the capital cost grant by the Province to $2,500.00 per bed or 50% of the cost, whichever is the lesser. They also receive an increase in the maintenance grant which now amounts to $8.00 per resident per month as from January 1st, 1957.

Four fully new Homes, with 395 beds, have been completed during the year. Two of these, with more bed capacity, replaced older Homes while the other two were additions to the total number of Homes. Two additions and extensions to older Homes gave 75 more beds. Under construction was one new Home with 189 beds and 2 additions and extensions to existing Homes to provide for 80 more persons. Plans are being drawn for five new Homes with an estimated capacity of 1,027 beds and one addition and extension to an existing Home which will give a further 19 beds.

It will be seen from these figures that Charitable Institutions are playing an important and steadily increasing responsibility in the care of elderly people in Ontario.

The Elderly Persons Housing Aid Act, 1952

Low rental housing for elderly people who are able to care for themselves is another step in the general plan of the Province in assisting our elderly citizens. As will be seen in the tables, 414 dwelling units have been constructed in 8 municipalities up to the end of 1956.

Two municipalities are adding to their existing low rental housing for elderly persons and 8 more have decided to build this type of housing with Provincial aid. This action brings the total number of dwelling units under construction during the year to 438. This means that more dwelling units were under construction during the year than had been built previously since the Act went into effect in 1952.

Two more municipalities are contemplating low rental housing for elderly persons and 2 others are contemplating adding to their existing accommodation.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

During the fiscal year 1956-57 assistance has been provided to persons requiring aid under the terms of The Unemployment Relief Act.

The continuance of the cash relief system has proved to be most beneficial to the persons requiring assistance. It has also proved to be sound administrative policy.

In municipalities the municipal officials administer the program, and in unorganized areas assistance is granted through the offices of the provincial welfare administrators. Municipalities received 50 per cent of the cost of aid issued within the regulations, and in unorganized areas the Province assumed the full 100 per cent cost.

Effective April 1, 1956, shelter allowances were increased throughout the Province.

Medical

All persons in receipt of assistance were entitled to receive free medical aid from the doctor of their own choice, either in their own homes or in the doctors' offices.

Dental

Emergency extractions, where required on recommendation of the municipal welfare administrator or provincial welfare administrator, were authorized. The Province paid 100 per cent of the dentists' accounts.

Accounts

There are 935 municipalities in the Province of Ontario. Accounts were received from 727 or 77.8 per cent of the total. All 29 cities rendered accounts. 311 municipalities are towns and villages with 238 of these submitting accounts representing 76.5 per cent. Of 595 townships 460 rendered accounts or 77.3 per cent.

During the previous fiscal year 932 municipalities submitted accounts compared to the past year's 935 accounts.

Expenditures

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1957, was $7,247,923, the Province contributing $3,890,767 and the municipalities $3,357,156. The gross increase over the preceding year was 5 per cent.

Supplementary Assistance

Supplementary Assistance to persons in receipt of Blind Persons' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance, or Old Age Security, was granted up to a maximum of $20 per month where there were extenuating circumstances. This assistance was mainly granted where there was a high shelter rate or costly drugs were required. The costs were shared 60 per cent by the Province and 40 per cent by the municipalities.

Number of Persons on Aid — March, 1957

During the month of March, 1957, there were 24,271 persons receiving assistance, whereas in March, 1956, the number was 25,803, showing a decrease of 1,532 persons.

Age Group 65-70 and over

In the month of March, 1957, there were 399 persons receiving aid in the age group 65 to 69 years, whereas in the previous year there had been 425. In the age group of 70 years and over 161 persons received assistance, whereas in the previous year there had been 131.

These persons did not have entitlement to Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security because of insufficient residence or other qualifications.

Incapacitation Allowances

A maximum amount of $60 per month, plus medical services, was payable to persons coming within this category.

Transfers were made wherever possible to Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms, legs, braces and orthopaedic shoes have been supplied to persons requiring prosthetic appliances, the cost being shared on a 50-50 basis with the municipality. The Province paid 100 per cent of the cost in unorganized territory.

This type of assistance has helped reduce hospitalization costs. This practice has often enabled the patient to be discharged at an earlier date than might have otherwise been possible. It has also made it possible for many to become self-supporting or to be able to assist in home duties.

Rehabilitation

Following the supplying of prosthetic appliances, rehabilitation was extended either under the provisions of The Rehabilitation Services Act, or, if the person were not able to qualify under that Act, under The Unemployment Relief Act. After completion of the rehabilitation courses, every effort was made to provide gainful employment for persons who had completed such training.

This rehabilitation program has shown very gratifying results and many persons previously unemployed have been placed in employment.

Desertion

Cases coming under this category have received constant attention. With the cooperation of the municipal officials and Provincial Police every effort has been made to apprehend the absconding person. As a result a number have been located. Following court action reconciliations and other adjustments have been made, thereby reducing the numbers receiving relief assistance.

The number of persons in the descrition category in March, 1957, was 1,370 against 1,182 in the previous year. The total number of descrition and separation cases in March, 1957, was 1,903 against 1,892 in March, 1956.

Taking into consideration the increased population of 287,000, there has been a percentage reduction in the number receiving aid in this category during the year under review.

Transportation

The Unemployment Relief Branch has assisted in paying transportation costs to municipalities where the deserting husband was returned to his place of residence for necessary action.

Inter-Provincial

Transportation costs were shared with municipalities in repatriating persons or families to other provinces where they have residence. Such procedures were followed after negotiations with the provincial authorities in those provinces. There was a considerable number of such cases processed each month.

Immigrants

Assistance was granted to immigrants who were in ill health and had not resided in Canada for 12 months from their date of entry. The cost of aid granted was shared on a 50-50 basis between the Federal Government and the Province of Ontario. Such aid was granted for a 12 month period from the day of illness or accident.

Economic Reports

Reports were received quarterly from the District Welfare Administrators and Supervisors showing the various economic trends throughout the Province.

Increase in Allowance

The present rate of 50 per cent being paid by the Province is under review. It is anticipated that effective April 1, 1957, the percentage of provincial participation will be increased, thereby reducing amounts to be paid by the municipalities.

General Welfare

This Branch receives numerous requests from municipalities, other provinces, welfare agencies, and other Departments of the Provincial Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to general welfare. Prompt attention was given by our District Welfare Administrators and Supervisors to all referrals sent to them.

Sincere thanks are extended to all municipal officials for their cooperation during the past year. Their efforts made it possible to provide assistance to persons in necessitous circumstances.

FIELD SERVICES

The Field Services Branch is responsible primarily for the completion of applications and regular periodic reports on all persons applying for or receiving provincial welfare allowances. Its main function is to ascertain, compile and verify factual information which permits the determination of eligibility and the amounts of allowances granted.

The counselling and guidance of individuals and families requiring public assistance is a second important responsibility of the field staff. As a trusted friend the provincial Welfare Field Worker is often asked by recipients for advice on household budgeting, for help in obtaining employment, for aid in securing funds for the education of children, or any of the other every-day exigencies of family life. Living in local communities in all parts of Ontario, members of the field staff are within easy reach of anyone needing their services.

Administrative coordination and control are maintained through seventeen District Welfare Offices and the Branch Office of the Department. Each provincial welfare district is administered by a District Welfare Supervisor or Administrator who supervises the field staff employed in the area under the jurisdiction of his office. The District Supervisor or Administrator also supervises and audits direct relief payments made by municipalities, issues direct relief to persons residing in areas without municipal organization, represents the Province in child welfare court actions, conducts special investigations on welfare matters, and approves claims for indigent hospitalization.

For the four major programs of Old Age Assistance, and Blind, Disabled and Mothers' Allowances, the Field Staff made 160,666 visits or calls to carry out these duties during the year. An additional 16,352 calls were made in relation to direct relief and miscellaneous matters, for a total of 177,018 calls. This compares to 169,827 calls made in the previous fiscal year. The average number of welfare recipients or caseload for which each Welfare Field Worker was responsible throughout the year was approximately 380.

In the course of their duties the Welfare Field Staff must contend with adverse weather conditions, seasonally impassable roads, and, in some remote areas, limited means of access. These difficulties were highlighted during the year by the tragic death on November 14th, 1956, of Welfare Field Worker, Mrs. Hilda A. Donati. Mrs. Donati was killed by a train while walking along a railway right of way to visit a recipient's home.

The continuing cooperation of municipal welfare officials and local private welfare organizations in treating difficult situations is greatly appreciated. Looking ahead to the coming fiscal year further decentralization of provincial welfare services is anticipated under the new Mothers' and Dependent

Children's legislation recently approved by the Legislature. This is the best indication that the decentralized pattern of Field Service enablished and developed in recent years has proven to be an effective means of serving those in need.

THE INDIAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE

During the fiscal year the Indian Advisory Committee, which consisted of Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman, Mr. Webster E. White, and Mrs. Benson Brant, visited the following Reservations:

Tyendinaga Reservation — April 17-18, 1956 Christian Island Reservation — June 12, 1956 Rama Reservation, near Orillia — June 13, 1956 Georgina Island Reservation — June 14, 1956 Caradoc Reservation — October 4-5, 1956.

During Committee visits to these Reservations a very thorough and extensive examination was made of all aspects of Indian life there. The Chiefs of the various tribes and councils were met and served as hosts to the Committee. Their observations on the present status and conditions of Indians on the Reservations were thoroughly canvassed. Officials of the Federal Indian Affairs Branch were also seen as were clergy, school officials; in fact, all responsible parties who had any comments to make about Indian life.

Findings as obtained on-the-spot concerning life on the Reservations were discussed with officials of the Department of Public Welfare, both in formal meetings of the Committee and in informal discussions with Departmental officials.

Committee Meetings

Committee meetings were held in the Board Room of the Department of Public Welfare on May 16, 1956; January 23, 1957, and March 5, 1957. During these Committee meetings some of the topics discussed were:

- 1. A possible loan system similar to the Junior Farms Establishment loans which might be available to Indians on Reservations to assist them in the establishment of farm, small business, et cetera.
- 2. Child Welfare intensive discussion ensued at Committee meetings in regard to many problems of child welfare as they existed on the Reservations. The relationship between the various Children's Aid Societies and the Reservations and the relationship between such situations and the Department were also discussed.
- 3. The relationship between the Departmental Indian Advisory Committee and the newly formed National Commission on the Indian Canadian.

REPORT OF THE SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION OF ONTARIO

The Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Q.C.. Minister of Public Welfare, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario.

Sir:

I have the honour to report on the operation of the Soldiers' Aid Commission and Ontario Canteen Fund for the fiscal year 1956-1957. While the Ontario Government does not provide any of the funds at the disposal of the Canteen Fund, it does supply quarters. The administrative staff of the Commission and the Secretary of the O.C.F. overlap.

The auditor's statement will be found as Appendix "A".

To secure a true perspective of the operation of the two funds it is necessary to consider the work of the administrative staff.

By personal contacts with members of the medical and dental professions, the suppliers of books, furniture, optical needs, wheel chairs, artificial limbs, finance companies, contractors and services, liquidation of accounts of persons in distress at reduced rates is made possible. This, of course, contributes tremendously to the conservation of the funds at our disposal. By the same token, the co-operation of all other sources of funds available for the assistance of ex-servicemen and women and their dependants relieves the strain on our funds and it is sometimes impossible to say in whose office the investigation and administrative work was done. It can be said, however, that because of the co-operation and understanding between the staffs of the various funds the ex-service man or woman in distress is helped to a far greater extent than would be possible if this co-operation did not exist.

The following comparison will serve to indicate the amount of work that is being done.

Total indebtedness—$62,290.00—settled at cost to S.A.C. of $13,357.00 Total indebtedness—$21,736.00—settled at cost to O.C.F. of $10,537.00 In other words, ex-servicemen and women and their dependants have been relieved of indebtedness that was causing acute distress in an amount of $84,026.00 at a cost to the funds of $23,894.00.

Demands on the Hammond Fund have increased in 1957 by 152% over 1956.

On behalf of my fellow Commissioners I express to you, Sir, our appreciation of the unfailing courtesy and assistance that we have received from your deputy, Mr. J. S. Band, and all members of your staff with whom we come in contact and our thanks to the staff of the S.A.C. and O.C.F. for their loyalty and devotion to their task.

Respectfully submitted, (Sgd.) T. M. Medland, Chairman.

ADMINISTRATIVE PERSONNIA.

REPORT OF THE DEPUTY MINISTER

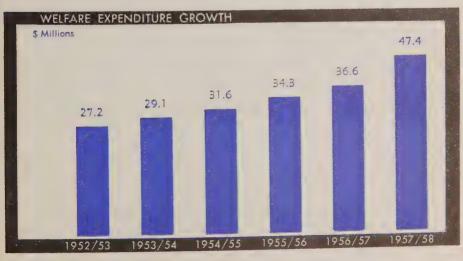

To: The Hon. Louis P. Cecile, Q.C., Minister of Public Welfare.

Much notable legislation relating to public welfare came into being during the past year. New Acts were introduced and existing ones strengthened through refinements and extensions, all of which were directed towards improved services and benefits for recipients.

Homemakers and Nurses Services

One of the most unique and rewarding Acts—Homemakers and Nurses Services—became effective officially on August 1st, 1958. This legislation recognizes the need to provide the services of homemakers or nurses to families and individuals, particularly when emergencies arise. The Act permits the Province to share 50 per cent of the costs incurred by municipalities in making these services available to their people. This advanced legislation is already being used to good effect by several municipalities and is being considered for early action by others.

Prior to the development of the concentrated industrial society of today, it was the normal practice for the members of families—usually larger in numbers than now—to carry out household tasks in emergencies involving the health of the mother, in particular, or in caring for incapacitated members of the family. Neighbours were also more frequently available to lend a helping hand in an emergency. It is true that a great deal is accomplished even today where suitable attention may be given by relatives and neighbours; but there is a very much higher incidence of cases without resources of this kind unless they are provided at the public level.

To illustrate the value of this new program, I would cite a case served under this Act by a city in Ontario. The family consisted of two adults and ten children ranging in age from a few months to twelve years. The mother had reached the point where she was quite unable to manage her household and, at the same time, was in urgent need of operative treatment and hospital care. The local children's aid society was particularly concerned with the home situation and considered taking the children into care for placement in foster homes. Fortunately, the municipal welfare department, in co-operation with the society, was able to recruit a capable and resourceful woman to serve as a homemaker.

The mother of the family was hospitalized for ten days and then returned to her home under medical supervision. The homemaker, however, continued with her duties until the mother was physically able to resume the responsibility of the household herself.

In this case, the services of the homemaker were provided for 24 days at a cost of $8.00 per day—total cost, $192. If, on the other hand, the children had been taken into care by the children's aid society for the same number of days, the total expenditure would have amounted to $563. Aside from the substantial difference in cost, it is apparent that far greater good was achieved by maintaining this family as a unit and by preserving family life. The circumstances outlined in this actual case give some indication of the practical solution for temporary or emergency cases involving stresses which may lead to the break-up of family life.

The provisions which the Act makes for the services of a nurse are equally important. In another Ontario municipality, the Victorian Order of Nurses is serving under this Act to great advantage. This municipality reported that 11 cases had received attention during one month. The majority of the persons served were elderly or incapacitated and needed nursing attention periodically. Nurses visited these 11 cases 123 times during the month. The total cost, at $2.50 per visit, was $307.50. The Province's share of the cost was, of course, 50 per cent.

It is obvious that, without the visits of a nurse, many of these persons would have required some form of institutional care at a much higher cost. There is no question that this program made it possible for all necessary attention to be made available to these individuals within their own home settings.

General Welfare Assistance

The new General Welfare Assistance Act, passed in 1958 and proclaimed in force on January 1st, 1959, has replaced the long-standing Unemployment Relief Act. This new legislation gives greater scope to a wide variety of services beyond the granting of what was formerly known as "direct relief". In addition to the standard type of aid made available to unemployable persons, special provisions are made for the granting of:

- (1) Post-Sanatorium Allowances on behalf of persons discharged from tuberculosis sanatoria;
- (2) Allowances for Nursing Home Care;
- (3) Supplementary assistance to recipients of Old Age Security, Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances; and
- (4) Aid to Indians.

Employable persons out of work and without the resources of Unemployment Insurance may also qualify for general welfare assistance.

A new principle was established in the Act to permit a county to administer all forms of general welfare assistance on behalf of the local municipalities within the county. Cities are excluded from the county form of administration and towns with populations of over 5,000 persons may be excluded if they so choose.

Administration at the county level should assure equal standards of care and service throughout the entire county. At the same time, this process would provide a more stable financial and population base for the provision of general welfare assistance.

It is anticipated that Indian reservations will, for the first time, be given the opportunity to participate in this program in the same manner as any local municipality. The sharing of expenditures on the part of the Province in relation to assistance (relief) for Indians is a departure from the practices of the past. With the adoption of this new procedure, the elected council of an Indian band will, in its own right, administer assistance to persons residing on the reserve of the band without reference to the Indian Agent representing the federal authority.

New Canadians who require financial aid will also come within the scope of this new Act. Assistance for immigrants will be administered at the local level. This move will eliminate duplication on the part of the federal Department of Citizenship and Immigration. During the first year of residence, municipalities will be reimbursed in full for expenditures incurred on behalf of new Canadians.

The programs designed to serve persons requiring institutional or group care were strengthened to provide a much wider financial base of operations. Homes for the Aged, owned and operated by municipalities, are now required to meet only 30 per cent of the costs of maintaining residents in these Homes. Charitable organizations sponsoring homes for elderly persons are now reimbursed by the senior governments to the extent of 75 per cent of the costs of operating these homes.

The rendering of adequate and advanced forms of medical treatment is an area of service which is receiving concentrated study. The Minister's Committee for Geriatic Studies headed by the Department's Consultant—Dr. W. W. Priddle—is embarking on a series of research projects which should lead to effective measures. It is true that the primary interests of the Committee are specifically directed towards serving persons in Ontario's Homes for the Aged; but beyond that, the medical profession in Ontario is being kept fully informed as to useful developments, all of which are directed towards the promotion of better health for older persons so that the later years of life will be enjoyed to the full.

Arrangements have been made to centre the activities of the Geriatrics Committee at Metropolitan Toronto's Lambert Lodge. The facilities available there for this joint undertaking should undoubtedly lead to developments of far-reaching effect upon the processes of aging.

Child Welfare

The highly regarded Child Welfare Act was also amended, particularly to strengthen and clarify the status of the adopted child, and the adoption process. The Act now gives complete assurance that the adopted child is, for all purposes, the same as any other child. The adoption process confers upon the adopted child all the rights and privileges (including full inheritance rights) which belong to any child born to its parents. Other technical amendments were introduced into the Act to lend further support to the child welfare services.

Questions relating to the specialized forms of care and treatment required by children who reside in charitable institutions are being reviewed by a Committee appointed by the Minister. Miss Bessie Touzel, Executive Director of the Ontario Welfare Council, has accepted the chairmanship of this Committee. Recommendations are anticipated which will relate to the development of the best standards of care and treatment and to the policies and financing of these institutions.

Mothers' Allowances

The expansion in the Mothers' Allowances program has been most impressive. Almost every type of case involving the well-being of children living with a parent or foster parent may obtain assistance in recognition of childhood needs within a family setting.

The allowances which are now granted largely conform to household expenses. This is the budgetary approach to public assistance and was a major step taken to meet the needs of families in a realistic manner. When the previous flat-rate method of granting allowances was replaced by the process of a monthly budget, the average cost per case increased quite sharply. A notable feature in the Mothers' Allowances program is the fact that the majority of the mothers are able to obtain additional income from other sources, mainly through part-time employment. In this way, they can contribute to their own needs and the requirements of their families.

The introduction of the plan for the dental care and treatment of Mothers' Allowances children under 16 years of age is a progressive step. The arrangement with the Royal College of Dental Surgeons gives assurance of the provision of dental care to these children from the dentist of choice. It is well known that health and dental authorities have an abiding interest in the prompt treatment of children's dental needs. Good care of teeth, in the formative years, will lead to improved general health in later life. This program of treatment and education will have lasting values for families with qualifying children who would likely be without the resources to obtain needed dental care.

The Older Population

In Ontario there are about 650,000 people who are 60 years of age and over in a total population of approximately 5½ million. Very nearly one-half a million persons are 65 years and over, or 9% of Ontario's total population. Yet, only 3.7 per cent of the labour force is comprised of persons in this age group; or, in other words, only 1 person out of every 25 workers is over the age of 65 years. This is the lowest ratio recorded since the end of World War II. In 1945, for example, over 5 per cent of the labour force was 65 years and over.

In the year 1901, 47,263 persons in Ontario were recorded as being 65-69 years of age. This number has expanded 3.6 times. The increase in the age group 70 years and over, however, has multiplied in excess of 4 times and is now estimated to total 305,550 in 1958 as compared with 73,300 in 1901.

Since 1901, the age group 65 years and over has increased by 277 per cent. In contrast, the number of persons 0-19 years is 115 per cent higher. The startling growth in our aged population has proven to be one of the phenomenal features of this century. It presents some of the most trying problems in the whole field of human services.

The 1901 death rate applied to our present day population reveals a rather interesting feature. It is evident that some 36,000 people in Ontario are alive today because of the sharp decline in the death rate. This is, of course, partly due to the decrease in infant mortality; but more significantly, at the other end of the life span, to the prolonging of life for the older person.

The overwhelming increase in the numbers of aged persons requires the adoption of extraordinary measures to meet their needs. Aside from the persons who are capable of continuing in employment—if given the opportunity to do so—there are the questions related to the provision of maintenance for those without resources, hospital and other types of group care and proper housing. Despite all the measures which are being designed to meet the problems of elderly persons, it is apparent that there are factors which seem to evade solution.

The remarkable changes taking place in this industrial age confront us with difficulties which are almost insurmountable. Automation, and the development of modern forms of energy and machines, are presenting entirely new patterns of life.

Serious consideration must be given to the constructive use of leisure time. At intervals of 10 years, manufacturing industries in Canada have been working 2½ hours less each week. The table below is prepared by the federal Department of Labour. It is estimated that, by 1980, if this trend continues, the average work week will be about 34.33 hours.

Weekly Hours of Work in Canadian Manufacturing By Ten-Year Intervals — 1920 - 1959

Hours a Week	Year
49.8	1930
48.9	1940
40.0	1959

The majority of able-bodied, older persons, now and in the future, will not likely have the opportunity of participating in the reduced hours of work; and the sheer fact of boredom, with the consequent loss of interest in life, is a most distressing and disrupting process. Certainly, the lack of employment contributes greatly to many of the discomforts associated with the later years. Unemployment is a disturbing event at any age, but an older person is virtually denied the right to work.

There is a deep-seated prejudice which exists on the part of a significant proportion of industry and business in continuing the employment of older workers, although many retain superior judgment and experience. Indeed, this attitude begins to take shape when the worker reaches the age of 45 years.

Positive measures should be adopted to stem this growing wastage of human resources. Possibly, we need to consider the development of non-profit industries which might be sponsored by private groups to absorb older workers. When we have a great many trained minds with unimpaired skills being left "to rest and rust", so to speak, who is to say that our normal free enterprise system is functioning as it should be?

The widespread use of the chronological age factor in industry and business is simply not practical today. There is no authority—anywhere—who can determine the productive value of a person in terms of his age.

There is no indication that governments would consider undertaking industrial projects in competition with private industry. It is evident, however, that we have long passed the point where an urgent need exists to create measures which will assure employment for older, capable workers. Industry must play a large part in developing the solutions to this extraordinary problem. The advantages to the economy as a whole are obvious.

Governments have gone a long way in providing funds to assist elderly persons to maintain themselves in later years, but we cannot expect that the provision of a maintenance allowance will fill the vacuum of an unproductive life. Pension plans are a poor substitute for employment.

Special Project—Study of Men 45 Years of Age and Over

There is every evidence that much additional research is required for the future well-being of men who have attained the age of 45 years. Towards this end, the Department has commenced a long-term study which proposes to review changing patterns commencing at age 45 through the later years. Within Ontario, 2,000 men who are now 45 years of age are participating to make this study successful. At this stage, all essential information is being acquired from the selected individuals by members of the field staff. The years 45 to 65 are crucial ones; but it is considered that beneficial steps can be taken in planning for the future of the persons in this age range. The three major areas of study are related to the economic, health and social factors. The entire group will be interviewed at yearly intervals to determine the nature of the changing conditions in their lives.

Preliminary information which has been processed on a portion of the selected group is most enlightening in its broad coverage. The cases which have provided complete information to date contain a wealth of useful data. There is no question that this long-term review of individuals, as they approach the later years of life, will prove to be of great worth in lending guidance to future planning.

Administration

The best utilization of the members of the staff of the Department is a continuing process. The consolidation of the services comprising Old Age Assistance, Mothers' Allowances, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances within one Branch has proven superior to the segregated approach which was in effect in previous years. In appointing one Director to be responsible for the administration of all these public assistance programs, both the internal and field office staffs are geared to the processing of cases in a much more effective manner.

The decentralization of welfare activities from the Parliament Buildings to the 17 regional offices has proven to be a wise move. Additional administrative duties have been delegated to these offices, with advantage to the Department and the persons served.

The on-going drive to reduce paper work to a minimum is also bringing good results. Forms of various types are, of course, essential to the work of the Department, but it has been possible to eliminate numerous duplications and questions of minor importance. Several major forms have been combined which has produced a reduction of many thousands of man hours. In one Branch alone, almost 100 forms were reduced to 28. The careful study and review which led to this notable reduction in paper work, as well as in the detailed processing, highlights the stress being laid upon the simplification of administrative procedures.

The staff of the Department is well balanced at Headquarters and throughout the field offices. Staff turnover is indeed small in number, resulting in continuity of services. The recruitment of members of the field staff in particular, continues to be achieved through the requirement of a qualifying examination. I am grateful for the devoted services of all those engaged in the work of the Department. The senior members of staff capably provide time and effort without reservation and accept their responsibilities to the fullest degree.

Gifford C. Price, Executive Officer of the Department, has given inestimable service in the preparation of legislation and in relation to the overall work of the Department. The Directors of the Branches, together with other Executive Officers, have maintained heavy responsibilities, all with great credit to themselves and to the Department.

It will readily be understood that the Department has an abiding interest in the welfare activities of municipalities and private organizations. I am appreciative of the healthy and satisfying relationships which have been developed over the years.

James S. Band, Deputy Minister.

Increase in Assistance

The maximum amount of assistance payable was increased from $46 to $55 a month, effective November 1, 1957. The income ceilings were raised from $840 to $960 a year in the case of an unmarried person, from $1380 to $1620 yearly for a married person and from $1740 to $1980 a year in the case of a married person with a blind spouse. The required residence in Canada was reduced from 20 to 10 years. The two Governments continued to share these payments on a 50-50 basis.

Increase in Numbers

The number of recipients climbed steadily from the commencement of the program in January, 1952, until in June, 1955, there were 22,185 persons, the peak number, receiving assistance. During the next two years, there was a falling-off in the number of recipients until a low of 20,443 was noted in June, 1957. Since then, there is again an upward swing in the caseload so that, at March 31, 1958, there were 21,077 recipients of old age assistance (12.5 percent of the estimated population in the 65-69 year age group). An average of 20,644 persons a month received assistance during the fiscal year 1957/58, a decrease of 2.4 percent from the previous year. However, total payments to recipients rose from $9,463,690 in the fiscal year 1956/57 to $11,394,698 during 1957/58, an increase of 20.4 percent. This was, of course, the result of the increased maximum monthly payments and income ceilings which came into effect during the year. The average payment to each recipient during March, 1958, was $51.76 and 80.5 percent of the recipients received the maximum payment of fifty-five dollars.

Further Increase

Although the resumption of the upward trend in the number of recipients coincides with the first increase in monthly payments and maximum permissible income which came into effect on July 1, 1957, there was a marked increase in the number of applications for assistance commencing with March 1957. A total of 8,343 applications were received during the year, an increase of more than 36 percent over 1956/57. During this period, 8,198 applications were fully reviewed with 84.3 percent approved for payment of assistance and the remainder declined or closed for other reasons.

Medical Welfare Plan

Medical care, under an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association, continued to be made available to all recipients of old age assistance, except those who were patients in hospitals for the mentally ill, at a cost to the Province, of $248,653 for the year. An additional expenditure of $1,019,697 was made by Ontario (the Federal Government does not share in this expenditure) to provide medical care to persons 70 years of age and over who are pensioners under the federal Old Age Security Act.

BLIND PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Persons in the age group 18-69 who are blind within the definition of blindness laid down in the Blind Persons' Act (Canada) may be granted a monthly allowance under an agreement between the governments of Ontario and Canada. The agreement was amended with effect from July 1, 1957 whereby the maximum monthly allowance was increased from $40 to $46. The maximum amounts of allowable income were increased from $960 to $1080 a year for an unmarried person, from $1160 to $1560 a year for an unmarried person with a dependent child or children, from $1560 to $1740 yearly for a married person and from $1680 to $1860 a year for a married person with a blind spouse.

A second change was made in the agreement and came into effect on November 1, 1957. The maximum amount of allowance was increased to $55 a month and the yearly amounts of maximum permissible income were increased to $1200, $1680, $1980 and $2100, respectively.

As a result of these changes, expenditures for allowances during 1957/58 showed an increase of 19.8 percent over the previous year, a total of $985,105 having been expended. Payments were made to an average of 1,706 persons a month and this was a decrease of less than one percent from the year 1956/57. At March 31, 1958, there were 1,720 recipients, receiving an average payment of $53.73 and only 7 percent of the recipients received less than the $55 maximum monthly payment.

A total of 354 persons applied for an allowance during 1957/58 as compared with 250 in the previous year. Of the 295 applications disposed of during the year, 69.5 percent were approved for payment. The remainder were declined or were closed for other reasons.

Medical Welfare Plan

Recipients under this program, except patients in hospitals for the mentally ill, were covered under the Department's Medical Welfare Plan as were other recipients of a welfare allowance. An expenditure of $19,865 was made by the Province during 1957/58 for medical care for the blind, under this plan. An additional expenditure of $11,149, of which Ontario paid $2,960, was made under a medical treatment plan for the restoration of sight. This latter plan is carried out in conjunction with the Federal Government and the costs of treatment are shared on the same basis as the costs of allowances—namely 25 percent by Ontario and 75 percent by Canada.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

Allowances to disabled persons, 18 years of age and over, were provided under an agreement between the Province and the Federal Government, sharable on a 50-50 basis. The agreement came into effect January 1, 1955 permitting a maximum allowance of $40 a month. Effective July 1, 1957 the maximum monthly allowance payable was increased to $46 a month and to $55 a month with effect from November 1, 1957.

The maximum amounts of income allowed were raised from $720 to $840 a year for an unmarried person, from $1200 to $1300 a year for a married person and from $1320 to $1740 a year for a married person with a blind spouse, effective July 1, 1957. Commencing November 1, 1957 these yearly income ceilings were raised to $960, $1620 and $1980, respectively.

Definition Broadened

Two other important changes came into effect in November, 1957. The definition of "total and permanent disability" was broadened and the allowance was extended to persons who are in certain institutions. A person who is a patient or resident in an infirmary, home for the aged or an institution for the care of incurables is now eligible for an allowance if he or someone on his behalf is paying for the whole or the greater part of his accommodation.

Increases

Expenditures for allowances amounted to $5,063,685 during the fiscal year. This was an increase of 36.3 percent over the $3,715,443 expended during 1956/57 and was mainly the result of the increases in the maximum monthly allowance payable, and the increased yearly maximum permissible income. However, the number of recipients has been increasing steadily and the peak number has not yet been reached. During 1956/57, the average number of recipients was 7,823 per month, whereas the average monthly number during 1957/58 was 8,708, an increase of 11.3 percent. No doubt the change in the definition of total and permanent disability played a significant part in this increase. At March 31, 1958, there were 9,412 persons receiving the allowance at an average payment of $54.23, for March.

Applications were received from 3,463 persons during the year and 1,884 applications previously declined were reopened at the request of applicants. Of 3,947 applications reviewed, 59.7 percent were approved and allowances granted—as compared with 52.2 percent approved during 1956/57—and the remainder were declined or otherwise closed. Of the applications declined, by far the greatest number of applicants, 86.2 percent, failed to qualify for an allowance on medical grounds.

Every recipient of a disabled persons' allowance was eligible for medical care under the Medical Welfare Plan. Expenditures by the Province, during 1957-1958, amounted to $109,716 for this purpose.

REHABILITATION SERVICES

During this second year of operation, the Rehabilitation Services Section has continued to offer a program of vocational rehabilitation for persons suffering from physical or mental handicaps. Through vocational training and other services, disabled persons are assisted in overcoming their handicaps and in becoming independent, contributing members of society.

Throughout the year, some 411 persons were referred for assistance, while the Departmental Selection Committee approved 268 applications for vocational training programs. Two hundred and eighty-seven students actually commenced courses of training, while for 117 applicants, vocational training did not provide the answer. These were either placed directly in employment or, being too handicapped to become employable, were referred for assistance under the Disabled Persons' Act or other public assistance programs.

Screening

Persons who can benefit from assistance under this program may be referred directly to the Rehabilitation Services Section, any of the Department's seventeen Regional Welfare Offices, or an approved private agency which provides services for special categories of handicapping disabilities. Each person who is accepted for assistance undergoes a thorough assessment in order to help him determine the type of job for which he is best suited. Medical assessment is obtained through his attending physician, hospital clinic, or rehabilitation centre. Social and vocational assessment and counselling are provided by rehabilitation counsellors of the Rehabilitation Services Section, private rehabilitation organizations, or special vocational counselling services. If medical treatment or prosthetic appliances are required, these are obtained under the Unemployment Relief Act, without the assistance of the municipality, or through private organizations, such as the Rehabilitation Foundation for Poliomyelitis and the Orthopaedically Disabled, or the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. For those handicapped persons who require the provision of a new skill in order to obtain employment, the Rehabilitation Services Section, in cooperation with the Federal Government, pays for the cost of tuition, maintenance and transportation. During the year, a total of $199,978 was spent on training programs, sharable on a 50-50 basis with the Government of Canada.

Types of Referrals

With two or three exceptions, there has been little change in the types of disability being referred for service. These exceptions are tuberculosis, mental retardation and mental illness. While there has been a relative decline in the number of the tuberculous from the previous year of from 50 to 53 percent, there was, in contrast, an increase in persons suffering from mental retardation and mental illness of from 1.7 to 8.7 percent. This reflects the increase in the utilization of rehabilitation services by Ontario Hospitals and the Ontario Association for Retarded Children. As the Ontario Hospitals become more familiar with this program, this growth can be expected to continue.

Successful Rehabilitation

This year is the first time it has been possible to report on the first 138 persons who were rehabilitated and made into self-supporting citizens. It is interesting to note that almost two-thirds of these were trained in clerical occupations. Clerical work is, of course, a relatively light type of occupation and for those persons who have the interest and aptitude for this kind of employment, clerical training provides the most successful form of rehabilitation. Many persons, of course, are more suited to technical and mechanical occupations and for these employment opportunities are much more limited. Nevertheless, over one-third of those rehabilitated were trained and placed in such occupations as barbering, welding, stationary engineering, multilith operating, hair-dressing, photo-finishing, machine operating, watchmaking and jewellery arts, radio and television repair, etc. When it is realized that the majority of these persons earned between $2000-$3000 per annum following the first year of employment, the average cost of approximately $500 per rehabilitant has proven to be a sound investment.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

The Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances Act, 1957, was assented to on April 3, 1957 and replaced the former Mothers' Allowances Act, 1952. The outstanding feature in the new act is the principle of relating the amount of monthly allowance directly to the financial need of families. Previously, allowances were provided on a flat rate basis related to the size of family only.

Budgeted Allowances

Allowances are now calculated on a budgetary basis and reasonable amounts are provided for food, clothing, shelter, fuel and other items. Maximum monthly allowances range from $120 for a mother with one dependent child in her care to $180 for a family where there are 7 or more beneficiaries. Allowances to foster mothers, for the care of foster children, continue to be made on a flat rate basis. A monthly allowance of $30 is provided for one foster child, $55 a month for two foster children and $15 a month for each additional foster child.

The number of families receiving the allowance increased from an average of 7,269 a month during 56/57 to an average of 8,078 a month during 57/58. At March 31, 1958 there were 8,580 recipients receiving an allowance covering a total of 29,131 beneficiaries. Expenditures for allowances amounted to $8,947,401 for the year—this was an increase of 28.1 per cent over 56/57 when $6,985,225 was expended. The average payment per case in March, 1958, was $104.38 and $30.74 was the average per beneficiary.

Of 4,034 applications reviewed during the year, 61.1 percent were approved and allowances granted; the remainder were declined for various reasons. Widows constituted the largest group to whom an allowance was granted—27.8 percent of the total. The number of applications approved on behalf of children born out of wedlock formed 22 percent of the total. Of the 8,580 recipients receiving an allowance at March 31, 1958, 94.8 percent were mothers (including unwed mothers), 4.8 percent were foster mothers and the remainder, 0.4 percent, were dependent fathers caring for dependent children.

Medical care continued to be made available to all beneficiaries under this program, through the Department's Medical Welfare Plan, at a cost to the Province of $343,618.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

Modern medical science is further prolonging the lives of our citizens. This means an increasing percentage of the 65 years and over age group. More and more of this group will eventually need bed care or special care if they become mentally impaired.

Accompanying this trend is the smaller space available in modern homes or apartments which scarcely provide living room to an ordinary family unit. Even with the best of intentions of sons and daughters and other relatives to care for their older kin in crowded quarters, an already acute problem becomes almost insoluble if the older person is bed-ridden or mentally impaired. Those who are bed-ridden require constant and competent nursing care, while the mentally impaired also require continuous surveillance for their own safety. Few modern families can give this care. If the aged person has no family, or a family who will not or cannot care for him or her, then other means must be provided.

It is because of these situations that the Ontario Government is providing increased care for the accommodation of aged persons. Special emphasis is being placed on the provision of bed care and special care accommodation as these are the growing needs of the present and future. The Province supplies financial aid under four different categories:

Homes for the Aged

Six new Homes for the Aged with a total bed capacity of 927 have been opened during the year. This would more or less accommodate the entire Village of Port McNicoll or Lucknow. Four of these Homes are entirely new homes, while two are new Homes replacing previous Homes and with more bed capacity. With one exception these new homes provide fully segregated care for normal elderly people, the bed-ridden, special care and married couples. It is significant that almost 50% of the residents in this class of home require either bed care, or special care when they become mentally impaired.

Further, three additions and/or extensions to existing homes have been made with a view to the enlargement or improvement of present accommodation. Two complete new homes were under construction; one to replace on a larger scale an existing home and the other an addition to the present number of homes.

Particular attention is drawn to the statistical section following this report. It clearly shows that the formerly fashionable congregate care type of home is being steadily replaced by the modern segregated care type.

Special Home Care

Aged people who are able to care for themselves and who prefer to live in the local community but who are otherwise eligible for admission to a Home for the Aged, may be placed in special care approved homes which are supported by the Province and the municipality. At the end of 1957, 150 were placed in such private homes in twelve different municipalities.

Charitable Institutions

Charitable Institutions Homes for the Aged complement the work of the municipally operated homes. They are governed by various religious, fraternal and other groups. During the year an addition was made to one of these homes which provided a further 36 beds. Construction began on three new homes with a 306 bed capacity. Two of these will replace old, smaller homes while one will be added to the growing list of Charitable Institutions. Additions and/or extensions to two existing homes have been started. These will add a further 65 beds. It is of special interest that plans are presently being drawn for five new homes with a total of 1,290 beds. This would more or less accommodate the entire population of the Village of Havelock in Peterborough County.

Tables in the statistical section give further details of the Charitable Institutions building program. It is cause for satisfaction that construction of both municipally operated and Charitable Institutions Homes for the Aged continue at an increasing rate.

Elderly Persons' Housing

The fourth category of Provincial subsidized accommodation for elder citizens is low rental elderly persons' housing for those able to care for themselves.

At the end of 1956, 414 low rental elderly persons' housing dwelling units had been constructed in eight municipalities. At the end of 1957, 879 similar units had been built in twelve municipalities. Thus, more dwelling units had been constructed in 1957 under the provision of The Elderly Persons' Housing Aid Act than any time since the Act was first passed in 1952. Another 526 units were under construction and expected to be ready for occupancy in 1958.

While these are encouraging signs of activity in the area of elderly persons' housing, this area is still less developed than it should be. Municipal authorities should carefully assess this means of providing economical and satisfactory accommodation for those old people who can continue to care for themselves if their surroundings are adequate.

Summary

This has been the most active year in the history of the Homes for the Aged Branch with record expenditures ($5,936,826), record construction completed (six new homes, four additions and/or extensions), record accommodation (10,902 beds), and record utilization of facilities (3,268,558 days' care registration).

Strenuous efforts have been made to keep abreast of the general economic expansion of the Province and particularly with the increased percentage of older persons who require care and accommodation other than in their own homes.

Emphasis has been placed on the expansion of bed care facilities as well as those for special care. More and more municipalities and charitable organizations are beginning to realize and accept their proper responsibilities in the care of our elder citizens. The number of semi-segregated and segregated care homes increases while the number of congregate care homes continues to decline. Modern Homes for the Aged are becoming an accepted and expected part of ordinary community resources.

It is particularly gratifying that the new homes are being properly used for the purposes for which they were specifically designed. This means that new concepts of care of the aged are being put into practice. The next fiscal year by all present signs will show even more activity, construction, and use of facilities.

Many persons interested in the well-being of older persons have contributed to this important field of public welfare. Particular appreciation is extended to the Boards of Management of our Municipal Homes for the Aged, to their Committees, Secretaries, Treasurers and Superintendents, for their support, guidance and concern. Similar appreciation is expressed to the Boards of Directors of Charitable Institutions Homes for the Aged and their responsible officials. Community team-work is being increasingly supplied in caring for our senior citizens to their evident benefit.

CHILD WELFARE BRANCH

During the fiscal year 1957/58 the 55 Children's Aid Societies and the 47 private institutions serving children and youth operating under The Child Welfare Act and The Charitable Institutions Act continued to fill their roles with increasing effect. Under the supervision of the Child Welfare Branch and receiving major financial assistance from municipalities and the provincial government, the Societies and institutions give assurance that the welfare of Ontario children is well protected.

The Needs of Children

To consider the child only as an individual and to ignore the relationships which bind him inevitably to his parents and brothers and sisters, is to misunderstand the complex creature we know as the child. In planning for the welfare of the child who does not enjoy the ordinary child's blessings of a secure and unchallenged position in the heart of his family, it would be dangerous indeed to plan only for his obvious needs—a place to live and people to care for him. The deprived child does not easily shed the biological and psychological bonds which unite him with his own people, nor does he readily form new bonds with substitute parents.

Child Protection

Children's Aid Societies and children's institutions are sensitive to these facts and seek a sound alternative to separation of children and parents. During the year, the Societies assisted the families of 41,000 children to create an emotional climate and physical atmosphere more favorable to their normal development.

Adoption

Where the family group is irreparably broken, every effort is being made to place children in permanent adoption homes. During the year, the Societies placed some 3,000 children for adoption and assisted in the adoption of 1,000 more. In this connection good results have come from two special activities of this Branch: first, the Adoption Clearance Service which brings families and adoptable children together in all parts of the Province, and second, a specific publicity and advertising campaign.

Care in Substitute Homes

As the child is a member of a family unit, so is he also a member of a community and susceptible to the effects of that community upon his family. The inadequacy of parents is often responsible for neglect of children, but, so too are seasonal unemployment, poor housing, illness of a parent, desertion, and many other factors which impose serious strains on the family.

In the light of these conditions, the community has two clear responsibilities: first, to protect the child who is deprived, neglected or dependent; and second, to provide services to ease the abnormal strains on family life and help prevent family breakdown. In meeting the first responsibility, Children's Aid Societies gave actual physical care to 15,000 children in suitable foster or receiving homes, pending improvement of the natural home or, where return of the children was impossible, placement of the children in permanent substitute homes. The second responsibility has been met through provision of those provincial welfare services described elsewhere in this volume and through the many local public and private welfare resources.

Charitable Institutions

Throughout the year the Societies and private citizens have continued to use the variety of services provided by institutions operating under The Charitable Institutions Act. The numbers of children served by these institutions dropped from 5,976 in 1956/57 to 4,381 in the year just past, an indication that the institutions are being more selective in choosing the children who most need, and can most benefit from, institutional care.

The essential services of the eleven homes for unmarried mothers should not be overlooked. The unmarried mother, faced not only with her own problems but perhaps also with a burden of shame, grief and rejection, presents a complex need for help. During the year more than 1,200 expectant unmarried mothers received sympathetic care and counselling in supervised maternity homes.

Children's Boarding Homes Act

Now in its first year of operation, The Children's Boarding Homes Act is designed to safeguard the welfare of children placed by their parents in homes offering group care to children from five to more different families. The Act has been applied throughout the Province to some fifteen homes. Of these homes, one in particular, serving an excessively large number of children in inadequate quarters, has evoked considerable comment. The Act will continue to be enforced wherever applicable to protect children from exploitation in unfit boarding homes.

Financial Consideration

For the services described above, the people of Ontario in the year 1957/58 expended from the following sources and in the following proportions the sum of $12,483,778:

Province of Ontario	31%
Municipalities	44%
Campaigns and donations	16%
Parents and guardians	9%

The 31% provided from provincial taxes represented a per capita cost of 70¢ made up as follows:

Payments to municipalities Grants to Societies and Institutions Ward maintenance Supervision and survey services	.12¢ .06¢
Administration	.01¢
	Assessment of the second
	.70¢

Conclusion

During the year 1957/58, the people of Ontario have given ample evidence of their concern for the welfare of children. One result has been improved services, without disproportionately higher costs. Although the actual number of children served rose from last year, the ratio of this group to the entire child population was lower. Furthermore, while the actual per capita cost of services was greater than the previous year, there was little, if any, increase in the proportion of the tax revenue devoted to child welfare, in terms of the purchasing power of the dollar in the base year, 1949. The fact that child welfare services are improving, and that a decreasing proportion of the tax revenue is needed to provide these improved services, offers concrete assurance to taxpayers and contributors alike that they are receiving increasing value for every dollar spent in child welfare.

Finally, mention must be made of the many hundreds of dedicated men and women—both private citizens and elected and appointed representatives—who during the year gave freely of their time and energy. As Board members and volunteer workers, these men and women demonstrated the highest qualities of good citizenship in advancing in a very real sense the welfare of the children of Ontario.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

During the year under review there was a marked increase in the number of new nurseries applying for a licence, 63 as compared with 37 the previous year. Three hundred and eighteen nurseries were under the supervision of the Department throughout the year. On the 31st of March 283 nurseries were open, of which 250 had been granted licences as compared with 227 the previous year.

During this period 35 nurseries closed, almost exactly the same number as the previous year. Only 6% of licensed nurseries closed, whereas 42% of the unlicensed nurseries ceased operation. The high proportion of unlicensed nurseries closing indicates that failure to meet regulations is the major factor in their inability to continue.

The number of nurseries receiving public funds is only 10% of the total number of nurseries, although they represent 14% of the total enrolment. The great majority of the nurseries depend on parents' fees or community funds for financial support.

Day Nurseries

One nursery in six in Ontario is offering a full day program to meet the needs of the working mother. Nearly one-quarter of the children in nurseries are enrolled in this type of program. The all-day nursery continues to be associated with the urban centres. Only 10% of day nurseries are located in centres under 30,000 population, but two years ago this figure was 5%. The day nurseries continue to offer strong support to families where it seems necessary or advisable for the mother to work outside the home. In this way the mother has the satisfaction of knowing that she is helping to support her family, and that the children are being cared for in an environment which is beneficial to them in every way.

Private Kindergartens

The private kindergartens offering half-day programs for five year old children represent one-sixth of the total number of nurseries. These kindergartens are located where local school boards have not yet been able to establish public kindergartens. They fulfill the desire of the parents to secure this important training for their children.

Co-operative Nurseries

Nearly all of the remaining two-thirds of the nurseries are half-day programs for children three and four years of age. Many are operated by private individuals; others are sponsored by churches or community agencies. Perhaps the most interesting group is the co-operative type of nursery. There are approximately fifty of these nurseries in which the parents play a major role in organizing and operating the nursery. These "do it yourself" nurseries have many advantages besides the obvious one of reduced cost. The parents come to understand what the child gains from nursery school attendance, and they find that much of the nursery school program is applicable to the home. Each mother also sees her child in relation to the rest of the group and thus gains a better perspective on her own child's development. The co-operative nursery offers as much to the home as it does to the children. Parents and staff of well established co-operatives are always willing to give guidance to new groups wishing to form co-operative nurseries. It would seem that we can expect a great increase in this type of nursery.

New Building for Nurseries

During this past year, one co-operative nursery group has built its own nursery. With the backing of their community these parents were able to erect a bungalow suited to the needs of a nursery school. Some seventy families are now served by this nursery centre. This action has set a precedent which may be followed by other groups. While this is the first co-operative nursery housed in a building erected for the purpose, there are now some half dozen nurseries in Ontario which have been planned by architects. They have demonstrated that proper planning of the building can add much to the comfort of the children and the serenity of the staff responsible for their care.

Appreciation

The work of the branch has been greatly facilitated by the help and interest of the local communities. The municipal fire and health departments have continued to give supervision to nurseries in their jurisdictions and to assure the health and safety of the children. Local nursery education associations have helped nurseries improve their programs by arranging training courses for staff and a yearly provincial conference. They have also done much to educate the public to the value of licensed nurseries. Our sincere thanks go to all these individuals who have contributed so much to the effectiveness of our efforts to make the nurseries in Ontario a valuable service to young children.

FIELD SERVICES BRANCH

The decentralization of Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances was the most significant development in the Field Services Branch during 1957/58. It was a two-fold operation involving the transfer of all Mothers' Allowances case files to their respective regional offices and the change from a flat allowance grant on each case to an allowance determined by means of a family budget.

As a safeguard, provision had been made in the new legislation allowing a period of six months for the necessary adjustments to be made. The new Act and regulations were proclaimed in force as of September 1st, 1957. Through careful planning and the extraordinary efforts of the staff it was possible to complete the transfer of all files and the budgeting of all except about 100 cases in time for the September allowance cheques to be issued at the new rates. The cases in which the budgeting was not completed were those in which there was a need for additional clarification before the family budgets could be calculated.

The budgeting of the current caseload was carried out by teams comprised of personnel from the Mothers' Allowances and other Branches, Regional Offices and additional new staff recruited for the purpose. For some of the Regions with smaller caseloads the budgeting was completed in Toronto, while in others it was done in the Regional Office. Overall co-ordination was maintained by the Personnel Officer in the Main Office of the Department. The ease with which it was possible to continue the decentralized administrative process is a tribute to those who were responsible for the initial budgeting. In particular, the services of Miss D. M. Crittenden, Executive Officer, are acknowledged for the able and efficient way in which she organized and carried out the assignment of staff to complete this complex task.

The transfer of administrative responsibility for Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances has changed the function of the 17 Regional Welfare Offices. Regional Welfare Administrators now are directly responsible for the authorization of allowances and the many clerical duties associated with the program have resulted in enlarged regional office staffs. With the Mothers' Allowance files readily available in each office it has been possible to eliminate certain clerical procedures that formerly were required and to utilize the staff time saved on Mothers' Allowances cases. In addition most of the personnel of the former Mothers' Allowances Branch were transferred to Regional Offices. In this manner the number of new staff required has been kept to a minimum.

Regional Administrators are enthusiastic about the advantages afforded by the decentralized method of administering this program of family aid. Among the more important are the ability to process applications and reports more quickly and the opportunities of finding alternative means of meeting the particular needs of each family group. This more personalized service, for example, has led to placement in employment and a greater use of rehabilitation measures for applicants and recipients which makes them wholly or partially self-supporting. It has been possible also to provide more constructive services in relation to cases of desertion and children born out of wedlock.

Other changes in legislation and departmental policy having a major effect on the responsibilities of Regional Administrators include homes for the aged, charitable institutions and unemployment relief. Commencing in December, 1957, the examination and approval of accounts covering operating and maintenance expenditures of public homes for the aged and charitable institutions was placed under the supervision of regional offices. These accounts are now examined monthly by Regional Administrators or other qualified personnel attached to Regional Offices.

Similarly, municipal expenditures for assistance to the unemployed are now checked monthly in the larger municipalities and quarterly in the smaller ones. The need for more frequent examination of these accounts is the result of provincial participation in the costs of assistance to unemployed persons as well as those who are unemployable. In addition expenditures on special works projects carried out by the municipalities to relieve unemployment during the winter months were examined and approved by the Field Services Branch.

In the administration of Old Age Assistance and Blind, Disabled and Mothers' Allowances the field staff made 167,641 visits or calls during the year. Visits in relation to Unemployment Relief, homes for the aged, charitable institutions, rehabilitation and other miscellaneous matters numbered 19,775. The total of 187,416 visits or calls compares to 177,918 made in the previous year. Each Mothers' Allowance case is visited a minimum of three times annually. About 25 per cent of the Old Age, Blind and Disabled cases are visited semi-annually and the balance once a year. The total caseload on which field workers were active increased from 40,605 on March 31st, 1957, to 44,732 on March 31st, 1958. The comparative numbers for each of the four programs were as follows:

Old Age Assistance Blind Persons' Allowances	22,683 1,783	21,668 1,690
Disabled Persons' Allowances Mothers' Allowances	10,718 9,548	8,787 8,460
Total	44,732	40,605

The average number of cases per welfare field worker remained about the same as the previous year at 381.

Continuing efforts are being made to streamline clerical procedure in Regional Offices and to eliminate duplication of paper work. The ongoing consolidation and revision of the many forms necessary for both case and statistical records has contributed greatly to more consistent and efficient office practices. This is being accomplished along with improved controls on any work which may be overdue.

The fiscal year of 57/58 has brought the first major expansion in regional offices and introduced a new administrative feature. It is obvious that the decentralization of departmental activities in this manner has been successful. With the co-operation of local welfare officials, both municipal and private, the Field Services Branch of the Department is able to offer effective service to those in the population who require public assistance.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES BRANCH

For many years the Department of Public Welfare has provided direct financial assistance, through several branches, to the aged, the disabled and to dependents where the head of a family was deceased or unable to support his family through incapacity. More recently, a new program was added, that of the rehabilitation of the disabled through vocational training. During 1957 the administration of the welfare allowances programs—old age assistance, blind persons' allowances, disabled persons' allowances, mothers' and dependent children's allowances and rehabilitation services—was brought together into one branch of the Department, the Welfare Allowances Branch. This will permit a greater degree of integration between the programs, in areas where this is considered desirable.

OLD AGE ASSISTANCE

The agreement between the Province and the Government of Canada under which financial assistance is provided to persons, in the age group 65-69, who are in need, was amended twice during the fiscal year under review. Commencing July 1, 1957, the maximum amount of assistance payable was increased from $40 to $46 a month. The maximum amounts of income allowed were increased from $720 to $840 yearly in the case of an unmarried person, from $1200 to $1380 yearly in the case of a married person and from $1320 to $1740 a year in the case of a married person with a blind spouse. This was the first change in the monthly amount payable and in the yearly maximum permissible income since the program came into effect on January 1, 1952.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF BRANCH

During the fiscal year 1957/58 assistance continued to be provided to persons requiring aid under The Unemployment Relief Act. The new General Welfare Assistance Act, which was to replace the historic Unemployment Relief Act, was assented to March 27, 1958, just prior to the conclusion of the fiscal year; however, the effective date was January 1, 1959.

The program continued to be administered by municipal officials under the supervision of the Provincial Regional Welfare Administrators whose responsibilities had been expanded from September 1, 1957.

The provincial share of municipal expenditures was increased from 50 per cent to 60 per cent on April 1, 1957. The maximum food allowances, in which the Province would share, were increased, also the maximum amount of sharable relief. Completely new regulations appeared on June 1, 1957, and included provision for increasing the provincial share of supplementary allowances from 50 per cent to 60 per cent also.

On December 1, 1957, the agreement which had been reached between the Government of Canada and the Province for the implementation in Ontario of the Federal Unemployment Assistance Act became effective. This made it possible for the Province to share in municipal expenditures on an enlarged basis to include not only the unemployable but the employable unemployed and the transients.

Effective December 1, 1957, the Senior Governments contributed 80 per cent of the cost of relief with the remaining 20 per cent being paid by the municipality. At the same time the Province increased its share of the cost of medical services from 60 per cent to 80 per cent with the municipality contributing 20 per cent. The Federal Government does not share in expenditures for medical services, dental extractions, and prosthetic appliances.

Likewise, patients who were discharged from T.B. Sanatoria and required after-care allowances had previously been a total charge upon the municipality. Commencing January 1, 1958, the Senior Governments reimbursed the municipalities to the extent of 80 per cent of the cost of this form of care during the patient's period of convalescence.

As formerly, the Province continues to pay 100 per cent of the cost of all Unemployment Assistance in unorganized areas with the Federal Government now sharing 50 per cent.

Medical

All persons in receipt of assistance were entitled to receive medical care from the doctor of their own choice, either in their own homes or in the doctors' offices.

Dental

Emergency extractions, where recommended by the municipal or provincial welfare administrator, were a continuing service. The Province paid 100 per cent of these dental accounts.

Accounts

There are 937 municipalities in Ontario. Accounts were received from 755 or 80.6 per cent of the total. All 29 cities rendered accounts. 311 municipalities are towns and villages with 245 of these submitting accounts representing 78.8 per cent. Of 597 townships 481 rendered accounts or 80.6 per cent.

Expenditures

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1958, was $9,505,543, the Province contributing $4,534,178, the Federal Government $2,135,461 and the Municipalities $2,835,904. Thus the gross increase ($2,257,620) over the previous year was 31 per cent.

Supplementary Assistance

Supplementary assistance to persons in receipt of Blind Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security, was granted to a maximum of $20 per month where there were extenuating circumstances such as high shelter costs or expensive drugs.

Number of Persons on Aid—March, 1958

During the month of March, 1958, there were 48,690 persons receiving assistance in contrast to 24,271 persons at the same period the previous year, an increase of 24,419 persons.

Age Group 65 to 70 and Over

In the month of March, 1958, there were 530 persons receiving aid in the age group 65 to 69 years, whereas in the previous year there had been 399. In the age group of 70 years and over 273 persons received assistance, whereas in the previous year there had been 161.

These persons were not entitled to Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security because of insufficient residence or other debarring factors.

Incapacitation Allowances

A maximum amount of $60 per month, plus medical services, was payable to persons receiving this form of assistance. Transfers were made, where applicable, to Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms and legs, braces and orthopaedic shoes have been supplied where such prosthetic appliances were required. The provincial share was increased to 60 per cent and later to 80 per cent during the fiscal year, while in unorganized areas it continued to be 100 per cent.

Rehabilitation

Rehabilitative training was provided under either The Rehabilitation Services Act or The Unemployment Relief Act for persons who had been equipped with prosthetic appliances or were otherwise eligible. After training, many persons were placed in gainful employment.

Desertion

Increased emphasis was placed on cases involving desertion. Municipal officials, provincial police and our own staff have combined resources to apprehend absconding persons, effect reconciliation when advisable and foster other adjustments so that a considerable number of persons were able to resume their proper responsibilities in society.

The number of persons in the desertion category in March, 1958, was 1,470 compared to 1,370 in the previous year. However, taking into consideration the increased population in the Province in 1957/58 there was no relative increase in this category.

Transportation

The Unemployment Relief Branch has continued to pay the transportation costs of municipalities returning deserted husbands to their families in the hope that the families might thereby be rehabilitated.

Inter-Provincial

Each month a considerable number of persons were repatriated to their previous provinces of residence with such provinces agreeing to repatriation. These expenditures were shared by the Senior Governments and the Municipalities.

Immigrants

The agreement between the Governments of Canada and the Province of Ontario concerning assistance to immigrants, indigent on account of illness or accident occurring within 12 months of their entry into Canada, continued in effect. Many such immigrants have since become self-supporting and have applied for Canadian citizenship.

Economic Reports

General Welfare

The Unemployment Relief Branch received many and varied requests from municipalities in all parts of the Province, other provinces, voluntary welfare agencies, as well as from other departments of the Federal and Provincial Governments. Referrals to Regional Welfare Administrators have received prompt and on-the-spot attention.

Welfare is a vital concern of our municipalities. Sincere thanks are extended to them for their cooperation, both in material assistance and counselling to those of our fellow citizens in necessitous circumstances.

PERSONNEL

The staff of the Department of Public Welfare is almost equally divided between those employed in the 17 regional welfare offices throughout the Province and the executive, administrative and clerical offices at the Parliament Buildings. In serving persons who come within the terms of the legislation administered by the Department, much more responsibility has rested on the field office personnel.

The expansion of the programs has increased the work-load in the regional offices. Part of this expansion includes the almost total administration of aid to Mothers' Allowances cases, as well as the acquiring of essential information in relation to all applications for Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances.

The treatment of persons who qualify for these types of assistance is, of course, a continuing and important responsibility. In addition, the regional offices have duties to perform under The General Welfare Assistance Act. This Act is concerned with the granting of aid by municipalities to their residents. The main duty, in this respect, is related to the examination of municipal accounts. Other responsibilities include the interviewing of persons who might benefit from rehabilitation services; the examination of accounts in homes for the aged, charitable institutions and day nurseries. The field staff is also involved, to some extent, in matters relating to hospital care.

The five offices in Northern Ontario all administer general welfare assistance directly to those persons who live in areas without municipal organization. There are many other duties, including special investigations and reports, which are treated and prepared by the field staff.

This multitude of tasks requires individuals who are competent and, while social caseworkers are not available in numbers, great care is taken in the selection of the field workers, especially as to their suitability for this type of work.

The training of new employees is a major task and is continuous in its operation. In recruiting personnel for field work, an examination of three hours' duration is utilized to provide primary information as to the prospective ability of the applicants for employment. If a passing mark is received and the candidate is otherwise acceptable—as, for example, with respect to personality and other related qualifications—he or she is required to undertake a concentrated course of instruction of some six to eight weeks under the guidance of the Director of staff training. If the candidate completes this training course satisfactorily, he or she is then given a probationary appointment.

In the year under review, 32 new field workers received this training while 7 of the permanent field staff took it as a refresher course. This in-service training process has also been extended to members of the clerical staff with much benefit.

Internally, clerical staff are processing cases for the various aid programs. Others are involved in the treatment of cases or in financial relationships with municipalities or private organizations. Many specialists are engaged in the various programs. They include medical doctors, rehabilitation officers, social workers and sociologists.

In March 1958, the staff roster was comprised of 443 persons. In the course of the year, 52 replacements were required and an additional 34 positions were filled to meet the requirements of the expanded services. We are fortunate in the stability of our staff and in the comparatively small turnover. We believe that the principal factors contributing to the small turnover are related to the high quality of persons recruited; the in-service training program; and the careful supervision provided.

The Department has continued to stress the importance of applying sound personnel policies in all of its administrative units. The Departmental Council has proved to be most effective. I would like to mention our appreciation to the Chairman of the Council, Mr. W. Gulliver, and to the members, Mrs. M. Lopatto, Miss I. Lawson and Mr. E. R. Peacock.

The distribution of the staff at the end of March 1958 follows:

Main Office	29
Soldiers' Aid	3
Child Welfare	35
Day Nurseries	6
Welfare Allowances	129
Rehabilitation Services
Field Services	210
Homes for the Aged	8
Unemployment Relief	15
Total	443

The personnel office is an active one. Its responsibilities are not only related to selection and training but also to a concern for the well-being of all members of the staff. The appointment of Frank Mulrooney as personnel assistant has served us well, particularly the manner in which he has assumed responsibility for the Province-wide employee selection.

We have a co-operative group of employees and I have appreciation for the manner in which they collaborate with the personnel office. I am also grateful for the helpful assistance given by the Directors of the Branches.

THE INDIAN ADVISORY COMMITTEE

During the fiscal year 1957/58 the Indian Advisory Committee met six times in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, bringing the total of such meetings to eighteen since the Committee first met on May 6, 1955. The Committee fortunately maintained the same membership as in the previous year: Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman; Mr. Webster E. White, Mrs. Benson Brant.

Eight different reservations were visited by the Committee as follows:

Curve Lake and Alderville Reservations, Peterborough Gold Lake Reservation, Golden Lake, Renfrew County Tyendinaga Reservation, Deseronto Sarnia Reservation, Sarnia Saugeen Reservation, Bruce County Cape Croker Reservation, Bruce County Cornwall Reservation, Cornwall.

Since the Committee's formation twenty-three visits have been made to various reservations, including practically all the reservations in southern Ontario and some in northern Ontario as well. Members of the Committee attended many Indian Council meetings and mingled freely with the Chiefs and members of the different Bands.

Aside from visiting reservations and bringing to the attention of the government matters of Indian welfare arising therefrom, the Committee discussed many general problems of Indian affairs in Ontario. These included child welfare, unemployment relief, Indian marriages, birth and marriage registrations, employment and re-training of Indians, housing facilities for elderly Indians, health conditions of the Indian population, and problems of non-Indians in relation to the Indian population. Partially as a result of the Committee's interest in the matter of birth and marriage registrations, the Registrar General's office has continued to accept Longhouse marriages as authentic documents.

The Committee, both individually and collectively, has been doing preliminary research to gather historical material in relation to Ontario Indians.

Contacts and liaison have been established, when required, with other government departments, including the Indian Advisory Committee of the British Columbia Ministry of Labour. Liaison was also maintained with the National Commission on the Indian Canadian.

The Committee was active in making known the eligibility of Ontario Indians for Blind Persons' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Mothers' Allowances, Old Age Assistance and Rehabilitation Services as provided through the Welfare Allowances Branch of the Department.

MESORT OF THE DEPUTY

To: The Honourable Louis P. Cecile, Q.C., Minister of Public Welfare.

The expansion in the social services during the past decade is worthy of comment. In Ontario, we have seen new welfare legislation introduced and each Act amended or rewritten. Refinements in welfare legislation are continuous and, without question, methods and the basis on which provisions for needy cases are made will require further treatment in the future to meet changing concepts and economic conditions.

Large expenditures are involved in the maintenance, care and treatment of children and elderly persons. Those in the productive or middle years are largely providing the necessary funds through taxation to support persons who qualify for public assistance under the various welfare Acts. This is a heavy burden for the relatively limited percentage of the population which comprises the work force.

The substantial sums of money required from direct taxing sources leave reasonable doubts as to whether the public assistance approach to welfare services can continue to carry the load. The supporting coverage of the majority of the population, by means of a compulsory contributory insurance maintenance program, is the alternative.

At the present time, welfare legislation in Ontario establishes both direct and indirect provincial financial responsibilities. Certain large groups of persons qualify for maintenance payments directly from the Province on a monthly basis by way of Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances, Mothers' Allowances and Rehabilitation Services.

Many thousands of persons also benefit indirectly from the provincial grants that are made to public and private organizations which operate Homes for the Aged and charitable institutions for children, youths, unwed mothers and elderly persons. General Welfare Assistance for individuals and families, and the Day Nurseries program are administered by municipalities; while Children's Aid Societies, operated by privately incorporated Boards, are responsible for child welfare services. These programs, too, are heavily subsidized by the Province.

In reviewing the amendments to existing legislation, it will be seen that each Act has been broadened to include more generous eligibility requirements and to provide for increases in maintenance payments and provincial grants.

CHILDREN

Child Welfare

Ontario's Child Welfare Act is considered to be a model of legislation designed, in every particular, to preserve the rights and well-being of children. The present Act is the result of a consolidation of three previous Acts. It confers upon Children's Aid Societies the responsibility for the care and treatment of children; gives full authority to serve their needs; and defines neglect of every kind for the purposes of necessary legal action to protect the child.

The privately operated Children's Aid Societies are adequately supported by public funds. Jointly, the municipalities and the Province contribute about 90% of the financial base for the child welfare program which costs, in all, about $12 million a year. The total sum from provincial and municipal taxing sources exceeds the expenditures for similar programs in all other jurisdictions on this continent, with the exception of the States of New York, Pennsylvania and California.

Day Nurseries

Ontario maintains an advanced Day Nurseries program under legislation which provides for the licensing, supervision and regulation of all day nurseries in accordance with required standards.

Provincial funds are made available in the amount of 50% of the costs of operating and maintaining day nurseries established by municipalities.

Mothers' Allowances

Sweeping changes have resulted from legislative action in the Mothers' Allowances program which, in effect, is a public assistance plan to aid children and families deprived of a breadwinner.

The allowances are now based on the relative budgetary needs of the family in place of flat-rate grants. The administration of the program has been decentralized and eligibility requirements broadened considerably.

Assistance is granted on behalf of children who are dependent on mothers whose husbands are incapacitated, or who have deserted their families; and to unmarried mothers as well as to the families where the father is deceased.

Mothers' Allowances are provided entirely from provincial taxing sources at a cost of about $12 million per year.

Children's Charitable Institutions

There are twenty-eight private institutions serving children in Ontario of which five are treatment centres providing specialized attention and care. The treatment aspect in group care for children is currently receiving intensive study. It is believed that greater specialization is required for the future.

Many of the children are emotionally disturbed. Some have experienced difficulties in a family setting, while others suffer from various handicaps. It is frequently found that such children will respond favourably to group care within a children's charitable institution. The emphasis in the distribution of provincial funds to charitable organizations will undoubtedly be increasingly related to the further development of specialized treatment within these children's homes.

Children's Boarding Homes

A new Act was created in 1957 to assure that reasonable standards for the safety and care of children would be observed by the persons operating proprietary boarding homes for children.

The legislation is specifically related to homes where five or more children are lodged, boarded or cared for. Two closures of unsatisfactory homes, in 1959, resulted from the provisions of this Act in serving the best interests of the children concerned.

THE AGED

Homes for the Aged

A completely new Act was designed in 1957 to give strong financial support to the municipalities in Ontario for the construction and maintenance of their public Homes for elderly persons. This legislation makes possible segregated and specialized facilities for those who are bed-ridden, or who require semi-bed care, or who suffer from the effects of senility; as well as for the normal ambulatory cases.

Homes for the Aged are well underwritten, financially, with 50% of capital expenditures being provided by the Province. The municipal authorities are now only required to meet 30% of the operating and maintenance costs. The new Homes are bright and modern and give every comfort to those who need this type of specialized care.

The former old fashioned Houses of Refuge have been largely replaced, along with a number of inadequate proprietary nursing homes which were previously used by the municipalities for the care of their elderly residents. Associated with the Homes for the Aged program is a Committee for Geriatric Studies which is carrying out a variety of research activities towards a better understanding of the needs of elderly persons and the aging process.

A special feature of The Homes for the Aged Act permits care to be provided within private dwellings in the community. This Special Home Care Plan recognizes the person cared for in this way as "a resident" of a Home for the Aged, so that admission to the public Home itself, may take place without delay whenever the need arises.

Charitable Institutions for the Aged

A new Charitable Institutions Act was placed on the Statutes of Ontario in 1956, and subsequent amendments have given a new lease and encouragement to church, fraternal and other private organizations to replace existing buildings or to expand their facilities for the care of elderly persons. Provincial construction grants up to $2.500 per bed have made it possible for many private organizations to provide new or additional accommodation to serve our older citizens. These private homes for the aged are also subsidized, on a continuing basis, by the Province in the amount of 75% of their net operating and maintenance costs.

Elderly Persons Housing

Municipalities establishing special housing projects to serve the needs of elderly persons have received grants, since 1952, under The Elderly Persons Housing Aid Act in amounts of $500 for each dwelling unit constructed.

This provincial subsidy, along with the financial arrangements that are made through Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, enables municipalities to proceed with low-rental housing facilities for older persons at a minimum cost to local taxing sources. These special apartments are generally rented for $30 to $40 monthly, and are designed to accommodate couples, as well as single persons.

Old Age Assistance

Old Age Assistance has been available, since 1952, to needy persons in the age group 65 to 69 years who are eligible within the terms and conditions of federal legislation. The maximum allowance is now $55 monthly (originally $40 per month).

The major qualifications consist of a residence requirement of at least ten years in Canada (previously 20 years); income of $960 per year or less in the case of a single person, and $1.620 where the recipient is married and living with his spouse.

The Province shares an equal sum with the federal government in providing Old Age Assistance. Administration and medical services are a full charge on the Province. The same sharing arrangements apply in the case of the disabled and rehabilitation cases. Allowances for the blind are based on a 25% provincial contribution.

THE HANDICAPPED

The Blind

Persons aged 18 to 69 years, who are handicapped by blindness, receive allowances up to a maximum of $55 per month.

Federal legislation requires a minimum of ten years' residence in Canada, with total income, from all sources, not exceeding $1,200 or $1,980 per year, respectively, for single and married persons.

Remedial eye surgery is available where it is considered that sight may be restored.

The Disabled

Disability allowances are granted to persons 18 years of age and over who are totally and permanently disabled by reason of physical or mental handicaps.

Ten years' residence in Canada is required by federal legislation, together with income qualifications of not more than $960 per year for an unmarried person and $1,620 yearly where the recipient is married.

The Medical Advisory Board examines all medical evidence submitted with applications to determine whether the person may be classified as totally and permanently disabled within the meaning of the federal regulations.

The Disabled Persons's Allowances program was originally designed administered and financed entirely by the Province. After the development of two and one-half year's experience in Ontario, the Government of Canada entered this new field of public welfare. As a result, a federal-provincial disabled persons program was made available to all provinces in Canada, commencing January 1st, 1955.

Rehabilitation

In 1955, the Ontario Legislature gave approval to a new welfare measure entitled The Rehabilitation Services Act.

Under this Act, physically and mentally handicapped persons receive vocational training in skilled and semi-skilled trades, clerical and technical occupations, on-the-job training and professional training depending upon individual initiative, ability and capacity. Maintenance allowances are also provided, where required, during the training periods which vary from a few months to several years, in some cases.

Since the inception of this program, many hundreds of handicapped persons have been successfully rehabilitated from a life of dependency to an independent, self-supporting status.

MISCELLANEOUS

General Welfare Assistance

In 1958, The General Welfare Assistance Act was enacted to replace the former Unemployment Relief Act which was originally placed on the Statutes of Ontario in 1935.

This program, which is administered by the municipalities, provides for the maintenance of individuals and families who do not qualify for public assistance under the other special welfare measures. The federal government provides 50% of the expenditures, excluding medical services.

The various items of aid include assistance for food, clothing, household sundries, special diets, extraordinary needs, utilities, fuel and shelter. The legislation also provides for assistance to persons in hostels, post-sanatorium allowances, nursing home care, transportation allowances and special assistance for persons residing in unorganized territories.

An amendment to the Act in 1959 has made it possible for the elected Councils of Indian Bands living on reserves to participate in the General Welfare Assistance program in the same manner as municipalities. A number of Indian Bands have already commenced to administer assistance under the provincial Act on behalf of their members on a sharable basis with the Province. This is a further step in the process undertaken in recent years to make welfare services available to the Indian citizens of this Province in the same manner as to all other people in Ontario.

Homemakers and Nurses Services

The Homemakers and Nurses Services Act, which was proclaimed in force on August 1st, 1958, permits municipalities to provide home-care services to their residents on a 50-50 cost sharing arrangement with the Province. The services of a trained homemaker may be made available to a family during a period of crisis or emergency, or to individuals—mainly elderly and handicapped persons. In this way, the family is able to remain together as a unit, while older and handicapped persons can continue to live in the community rather than requiring hospital or institutional care. Visits by a registered nurse may also be arranged where a physician deems such services are necessary for the care of the person at home.

Many municipalities throughout Ontario are participating in this new program. It is their usual practice to utilize the services of existing homemakers and nursing services organizations.

There is no question that these services add to the comforts of homebound persons and provide a very worthwhile and much needed alternative to hospital and institutional care.

Medical and Dental Services

Under an Agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association, medical services are made available to recipients of Old Age Assistance, Blind and Disabled Persons' Allowances, Mothers' Allowances and handicapped persons during their period of rehabilitation. Persons who receive aid through their municipality under The General Welfare Assistance Act are also eligible for these medical services. The municipality shares 20% of the costs of the Medical Welfare Plan for their recipients of General Welfare Assistance; but the costs for all other persons are met entirely by the Province.

Dental services are made available to children in Mothers' Allowances families under a special Agreement between the Province and the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

Our welfare cases also receive premium free hospitalization insurance coverage.

These special services are designed to meet the health needs of recipients of public assistance.

THE OLDER WORKER

While there is a reluctance to view with alarm the role of persons 45 years of age and over, it seems timely to express concern as to present and future hazards. There is no question that economic conditions in the past decade have been buoyant. Nevertheless, the opportunity for gainful employment by the older worker declines as his age increases. The person who has attained the age of 65 years has only the remotest chance of finding suitable employment.

Employers, generally, are seeking man power from what they view as "the productive years"—that is, up to the age of 45. When a separation from employment occurs, the older worker very frequently relies on Unemployment Insurance or savings and, in some cases, public assistance.

The labour force in Canada has shown a constant, sharp decrease in the percentage of workers aged 65 years and over—as may be seen in the following Table:

Year of	Total Labour Force in Canada	Age Group 65 Years and Over	Percentage
Estimate 1945 1950	4,515,000 5,138,000	232,000 233,000	5.14% 4.53
1955 1959	5,639,000 6,247,000	217,000 222,000	3.85 3.55

Private insurance schemes are frequently used as the means to restrict employment of persons in the later years of life. Superannuation benefits in government, for example, are not available to an employee who has been hired after the age of 50 years.

The replacement of men by machines—the normal result of automation—is also proving to be an effective barrier to the employment of the older worker. We are informed that, within the next decade, automation in certain fields of industry will possibly replace four out of five industrial workers through the development and use of robot machinery. If this prediction becomes a reality, there will be a radical need for a reduction in the work week, retraining of older workers in other than industrial occupations and additional social security measures for the growing number who will not be acceptable within the labour force.

The booming population increase, together with the dominance of machines and the increasing life span, poses problems, in particular, for the maintenance of older people. It is estimated that competition from the very young job-hunter will be evident in the light of an anticipated 100,000 new job-seekers in each year during the 1960's. Only about 5% of this number were seeking employment and were absorbed in the labour force during the period 1935 to 1955. Our way of life is threatened, to some degree, by the vast changes in our economy resulting from the discoveries of science and the increasing population.

Life expectancy, according to the American National Office of Vital Statistics, points to the following added years:

Age	Life Expectancy (in years) 1958	Age		Life Expectancy (in years) 1958
45	29.1	65		14.0
50	24.9	70		11.2
60 -	17.3	80		6.3

The immediate risks for the older worker are related to health problems. discriminatory employment practices and insufficient income. The highly limited Canadian Social Security scheme, which provides a flat-rate payment of $55 monthly for persons 70 years of age and over, is also inadequate insofar as the commencement age is concerned.

Females, who marry at a younger age than males, frequently find themselves in a dependent condition in the later years of life—often from 60 years on—and then must rely, entirely, on means test programs in the form of direct relief or Old Age Assistance. At this time, almost 60% of the persons receiving direct relief (aged 60 years and over) and approximately 60% of the Old Age Assistance recipients are female. These women not only lack the support of a breadwinner, but they are usually unable to take employment or are not acceptable within the labour force. It is interesting to see that Great Britain and Sweden, both of which previously relied on flat-rate social security payments, have revised their programs to encompass combination plans on a contributory basis related to earnings. The flat-rate method of meeting the needs of elderly persons has been found wanting in almost every country which operates a social security plan to serve older people.

The American Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance program is a well-rounded plan to meet the major requirements of its citizens. It is a compulsory contributory plan which covers 93% of the population. Contributions are related to earnings and applied up to a maximum of $4,800 per year, with the present rate being 3% each by employers and employees, and 4½% by the self employed. Although the contributory rate increases in accordance with actuarial requirements, the cost to the individual for the benefits derived is modest indeed.

The United States plan, when compared to the approach taken in Canada. may be seen more readily through the following example of an actual case: This concerns a lady—a resident of the United States—who, after working for the same firm for most of her life, reached the age of 62 in failing health. She found it necessary to take advantage of her Social Security benefits and became eligible for $102 monthly. In addition, the company pension plan provided $94.40. In all, she received $196.40 each month. Her eligibility for these two pensions was accumulated by herself as a matter of right through contributions to the Social Security scheme and the company pension plan. This lady died at the age of 65 years; but during the three-year period in which benefits were paid, she enjoyed a reasonable standard of living.

Under the Canadian scheme, it is obvious that this lady would not have lived long enough to obtain the $55 flat grant from the federal government; and, because of the amount of benefits being received under the company pension plan, she would not have been eligible for public assistance. Her income—with serious health problems to face—would have been restricted to the $94.40 per month. Although all cases do not receive $102 monthly by way of U.S. Social Security benefits, the amount that is paid is largely related to the previous earning capacity of the person.

It has been said that "Social Security was intended to provide a base on which the individual would plan his retirement income. Private pension plans were intended to supplement Social Security. Individual savings . . . provide such additional amounts as might be necessary to support the individual's standard of living."

LONG-TERM STUDY OF AGING

The Department has underway a continuing study of the economic, health and social factors in the lives of 2,000 men, commencing at the age of 45 years. These persons have consented to participate and are now providing the necessary information for this study on a yearly basis.

The first annual returns have been received, and visits are being made to the same individuals for the second year. The random selection of this group of male wage earners was made from all parts of Ontario, and almost every occupation in urban and rural areas is represented.

This progressive yearly review will permit exploration as to the conditions these men will encounter as a result of the process of aging. We are hopeful that the study will yield sufficient data towards the development of methods and policies that may help all older people to meet their problems during the later years of life.

The first results of this study indicate that the great majority of these men (85%) are in good or excellent health; mainly Canadians—born in Canada (80%); family men (95%) with 4,875 children (or an average of 2.4 per man); for the most part, living in urban localities (85%); and are well educated (61% part high school or better). We have also learned that 83% are employees; 86% have one or more social activities; almost all have life or accident insurance—with only 77 indicating no such coverage; 66% participate in company or private pension plans; and 80% are homeowners.

It is interesting to note that there was an overwhelming favourable response from these men as to the need for a government-sponsored contributory retirement system.

These are the major features gleaned from the initial information that has been submitted.

OTHER LEVELS OF GOVERNMENT

In its wisdom, the federal Department of National Health and Welfare has, up to this time, failed to respond to the proposal of Ontario that more latitude be given to the Province in the administration of the federal-provincial sharing programs. The federal authorities have established rigid and inconsistent regulations which provide for the granting of public funds beyond need for some cases with sizable liquid assets; and, at the same time, deny assistance to persons with meagre earnings because of restrictive limits on allowable incomes.

Interference continues on the part of the federal Department in provincial administration through the superimposing of federal doctors in determining the medical status of applicants for Disabled Persons' Allowances.

To date, the Federal-Provincial Advisory Board, which is established under federal legislation for the purpose of recommending "such alterations to the (federal) regulations as may from time to time appear to be necessary or advisable" has been virtually fruitless so far as results are concerned.

We are appreciative, however, of the fine measure of co-operation extended to Ontario by the treasury officers of the federal Department of Finance. The Chief Treasury Officer—Mr. T. E. Phillips—and his staff have facilitated the work of our Department at every turn. They have been most helpful and understanding in the administration of the joint federal-provincial programs.

Welfare measures administered by Ontario's municipalities continue to be of major importance. The excellent working arrangements between the municipal welfare administrators and the staff of the Department have proved to be of advantage to a great many needy persons. These relationships are well maintained by continuing conferences in the treatment of mutual problems. The Executive of the Ontario Welfare Officers Association has made a fine contribution to the establishment of administrative policies and in assisting in the development or refinement of the various programs. We rely heavily, of course, on the collective views of the membership of the Association in relation to any matters which may be of benefit to recipients of public assistance.

The proposed new General Welfare Assistance Regulations, which are at present under consideration, should serve to reduce much of the clerical and paper work which are involved in the treatment of the cases by municipalities.

Conclusion

This report has provided a sketch of notable advances in legislation during the past decade. Some concern has been expressed as to the problems and required services for older persons. Reference has also been made to the various studies being made; and our relationships with other levels of government have been briefly noted.

There is now an obligation, on my part, to state the debt of gratitude owing to the staff of the Department. It will be realized, by the very nature of the services rendered, that the staff is constantly treating the difficulties and problems of individuals. There is evidence of much understanding, concern and help for the persons coming to our attention. It can be stated, without any reservation, that all cases receive every possible consideration, and the benefit of doubt is readily given in any decisions which relate to their well-being.

In serving such a large number of people throughout the Province, coordinated planning and consistent administrative policies are required. The seventeen regional field offices maintain a multiplicity of services to individuals, municipalities and private organizations. The regional welfare administrators and their staffs are excellent examples of the best to be found in public service. In supporting the work of the field offices, the headquarters staff in the Parliament Buildings is equally adept in facilitating assistance to our cases.

The Directors of each of the Branches, including the Executive Officers and the Accountant, are giving outstanding individual services. They perform their duties in a resourceful, painstaking and conscientious manner. The separate reports of the Directors are included in this annual review to indicate the nature of the programs coming under their direction.

I would particularly like to express appreciation to Mr. Gifford C. Price, Executive Officer, on behalf of the Directors and myself. He has been ever willing to assist all of us in a variety of ways. In addition, Miss Dorothea Crittenden, the Executive Officer in charge of financial and personnel matters, is giving extraordinary support in the operations of the Department. It will be readily understood that other senior members of staff make it possible for the manifold functions of the Department to be carried out with effectiveness and stability.

Ontario's newspapers and the reporters serving them have been most helpful in bringing to the attention of the public the variety of news which concerns welfare activities. I am particularly grateful to the members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery who maintain a constant interest in the Department and its legislation.

A great many organizations serve in the welfare field. In many respects, their operations are interlocked to some degree with the Department. The services they render are as vital to the well-being of the persons in their respective communities as the programs administered by the Department. We are thankful for and pleased with their ever-ready help in matters which concern the needs of persons coming to their attention.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

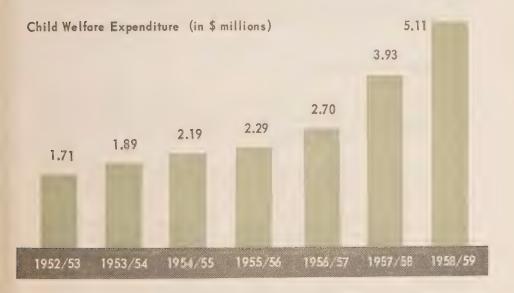

James S. Band, Deputy Minister.

Child Welfare Services

The Advisory Council on Child Welfare Services of the American Public Welfare Association defines child welfare services in the following way:

"'child welfare services' are those social services which supplement or substitute for parental care and supervision for the purpose of protecting and promoting the welfare of children and youth; preventing neglect, abuse and exploitation; helping overcome problems that result in dependency, neglect or delinquency; and, when needed, providing adequate care for children and youth away from their own homes, such care to be given in foster family homes, adoptive homes, child care institutions or other facilities."

Essentially towards identical ends has the province provided The Child Welfare Act, The Charitable Institutions Act, as it applies to children and unmarried mothers, and The Children's Boarding Homes Act, all of which are administered through this Branch.

Through the agency of inspection, supervision, advice and financial grants to 55 Children's Aid Societies, 42 institutions and some 14 private boarding homes did this Branch carry out its functions through the year just past.

These 55 locally autonomous semi-public organizations were directed locally by some 700 citizen Board members and staffed by more than 1,000 employees. They spent, in the services of children during the year, the sum of $12,500,000.00. Through the expenditures of these funds the Societies served in their own homes 41,500 children. They provided care in homes other than their own for over 22,000 children of whom over 15,000 were still in care at the end of the year. They placed some 3,200 children and supervised in all on adoption throughout the year some 4,500 children, and finally they served over 8,000 unmarried mothers and their 12,500 children.

In all a sizeable record. An increasing concern is being noted, however, that the proportion of staff in the high levels of skill and experience has over the past five years been decreasing rapidly.

Since the demand for such people continues to increase much more rapidly than the supply, Societies are being forced to make more and more effective use of the staff they have. Both in the interests of children themselves and toward reducing the numbers of children under the supervision of each worker, they are increasing and will be forced to increase even more the transfer of children from boarding to adoption homes.

Charitable Institutions

The trend towards reduced numbers and specialized services amongst institutions serving children continues. The reduction in children served is apparent in the following sequence: 1956 - 2,957; 1957 - 2,320; 1958 - 2,099.

The standard of service in the institutions serving unmarried mothers and the buildings themselves continue to improve. During the year 1,242 mothers and 523 infants were served.

The increased and thoughtful activity of the Association of Institutions Serving Children and Youth and its recent association with Ontario Welfare Council have and will continue to contribute much towards the more effective integration of institutional services in Ontario.

Children's Boarding Homes Act

A number of the homes first active under this legislation have reduced or varied their clientele with the result that they are no longer registered. A number whose standards did not comply with the regulations, have on their own ceased operations. During the month of June. 1958, Mrs. Bertha Whyte, operator of "Whytehaven" home for children, was placed on suspended sentence for failure to register under this Act. This home has since been closed and Mrs. Whyte has moved to British Columbia.

The source of all funds for child welfare in the last two years and the distribution of the provincial share may be of interest here.

The 15¢ per capita increase in grants to institutions, Societies and municipalities is reflected in the 6% increase in the provincial proportion of total costs. Despite these increases there has been a reduction of approximately 50% during the past 10 years in the proportion of provincial revenue finding its way into child welfare services—from .100% in 1948 to .057% in 1958. This is, of course, consistent with the reduction in the proportion of the child population cared for by the Children's Aid Societies during the same period—in 1948, 1.9% of the child population—in 1958, 1.00% of the child population.

DAY NURSERIES BRANCH

During this year there were 355 nursery centres of all types under the supervision of the branch. Five years ago the number was 284, and ten years ago it was 227. There has been a steady increase in nursery services available to children and parents. In the past two years the net gain in nurseries operating throughout the province has been thirty per year.

Nearly one-quarter of the nurseries now operating in the province have been licensed for at least ten years, and over half for from five to twelve years. Relatively few of the licensed nurseries have closed, but many unlicensed nurseries have ceased to operate. Pressure to meet a satisfactory standard and the public's growing awareness of the desirability of good programs for young children have combined to force poor nurseries out of business.

The nurseries which remained unlicensed at the end of the year were for the most part making efforts to meet the required standard. As long as the nursery supervisor is endeavouring to improve the program of her nursery, the branch continues to assist her in every way to qualify for a licence. Our staff has been gratified many times to see the marked changes that can be brought about through encouragement, suggestions and short training courses.

The leaflets prepared by the branch for the guidance of nursery operators have been much in demand by the nurseries. Sunday Schools throughout the province with nursery departments have also found them useful.

During the year the City of London passed a by-law qualifying the London Day Nursery for the provincial-municipal grant. The number of these public nurseries is now twenty-eight.

The half-day program for children of three and four years of age continues to be the most prevalent type of nursery and shows the greatest rate of increase. In the large urban centres there has also been an increase in the number of day nurseries for children whose mothers require gainful employment. More Nurseries are now offering both types of care—keeping some children all day and other for only a half day. Many of our former private kindergartens are being merged with the public and separate school systems, while new ones are being opened in areas where the school boards do not have accommodation for five year old children as yet. There is a tendency for a greater proportion of the nurseries to be operated by private individuals or by groups of mothers, with a corresponding decline in the percentage operated by public and private agencies. The initiative of private individuals and groups of parents continues to be the main source of new nurseries. These are the types of nurseries which require the most supervision from the branch.

Forty-four percent of the nurseries are operated in houses adapted for the purpose. Another 29 percent are located in the Sunday School quarters of churches. Community and public halls of various types accommodate 17 percent of the nurseries, and empty classrooms in schools 6 percent. It will be realized that these quarters are not as satisfactory as what could be constructed for the purpose and it is encouraging to note that a group of parents in Ottawa have built a bungalow particularly for a nursery. The building housing one of the Toronto Municipal nurseries has also been especially planned as a day nursery, and has many features which make it both pleasing and efficient. There are now thirteen nurseries enjoying premises designed for young children.

A survey was made during the year to determine the number of handicapped children attending nurseries. It was found that most of the nurseries have at least one child who have some fairly severe handicap, such as mental retardation, blindness, deafness or emotional disturbance. These children are usually referred to the nursery by family doctors. Many of them have benefitted greatly from the training received in the nursery.

The branch has been deeply interested in the Pre-School Parent Centre operated in Toronto by the Nursery Education Association of Ontario. Here parents of young children may find exhibits and reading material and sympathetic guidance in their efforts to provide the best for their children. The staff of the Branch are privileged to work with the hundreds of nursery staff and officials from municipal fire and health departments, all of whom are endeavouring to work for the safety, health and well-being of the young children in the nurseries.

Fiscal Year Ending March 31st, 1959

The activities of the Field Services Branch in 1958/59 were more diversified and greater in volume than in any previous year. The most significant reasons for the broader and increased responsibilities were:

- (1) The first full year of operating the Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances programme on a decentralized or regional basis.
- (2) The selection and interviewing of more than 2,000 men age 45 years for a Long Term Study of Aging.
- (3) The inauguration of new legislation respecting Homemakers and Nurses Services.
- (4) The introduction of the Ontario Hospital Services Plan.
- (5) The increasing case-loads in the major provincial allowances programmes.

The amount of clerical work associated with the Mothers' Allowances programme is considerable. Statistics show that approximately 2,500 cases including new applicants are reviewed each month. Of this number about 2,000 result in payroll changes in the form of new grants, suspensions, reinstatements and changes in the amounts of allowances paid.

The decentralized system of administering Mothers' Allowances has proven to have many opportunities to give better and more constructive services to families than was possible under the former method. This is particularly true in relation to employment and rehabilitation measures which enable a family to become self-supporting. The Regional Administrator and his staff are in a position to assess the potential of each applicant or recipient and also have a first-hand knowledge of employment possibilities in all parts of the region. Particular emphasis has been placed on assessing the circumstances of new applicants and to assist them wherever it is feasible in becoming gainfully employed. In other instances occupational training in such vocations as nurses' assistants, typists, hairdressers, etc., have led to full-time employment.

It has been possible as well with the co-operation of the General Welfare Assistance Branch to offer guidance to mothers who have been deserted. The problems of deserted families are often complex and require specialized treatment. Further efforts to strengthen this aspect of the services are being made especially in the larger urban areas.

In the last three months of the fiscal year the field staff in conjunction with their regular duties began the selection and interviewing of men aged 45 for the Long Term Study of Aging. The response to the Study has been remarkable. There have been problems in determining those of the correct age for the Study but surprisingly little difficulty in having them participate once the purpose of the Study was explained. The whole-hearted co-operation of many industrial, business and civic personnel officials assisted greatly in the selection of the sample.

The Homemakers and Nurses Services legislation and the introduction of the Hospital Services Plan have added new duties to Regional Offices. The five Northern offices are responsible for these services for persons requiring public assistance who live in territory without municipal organization. In the Southern Regions the additional work entailed has been primarily that of advising municipalities and assisting them in establishing their services.

To serve those applying for or receiving financial aid under the Welfare Allowances legislation the Field Staff made 186,554 calls or visits during the year. The visits or calls in relation to General Welfare Assistance, rehabilitation measures and miscellaneous services numbered 24,797. The total number of calls or visits, 211,351, compares to 187,416 in the previous year.

It is significant to note that the average annual cost per call or visit, exclusive of salaries, decreased from $1.00 in 1957 58 to 86c in 1958 59. This decrease appears to reflect more efficient planning of work assignments in the seventeen regions along with more adequate staff.

The total active case-load of field workers increased from 44,732 on March 31st, 1958, to 48,825 on March 31st, 1959. The comparative numbers for each of the four major Welfare Allowances programmes were as follows:

	March 31st	March 31st
	1959	1958
Old Age Assistance	24,109	22,683
Blind Persons' Allowances	1,821	1,783
Disabled Persons' Allowances	12,729	10,718
Mothers' Allowances	10,166	9,548
Total	48,825	44,732

The average monthly case-load for each field worker increased from 381 to 387.

Substantial progress has been made in reducing the number of annual, semi-annual and present condition reports on active cases that were not being completed within the required time limits. Many of these overdue reports were on cases in isolated areas or in areas where there was a field staff vacancy.

The introduction of a monthly control by means of a key-sort index in each Regional Office during the year brings all overdue work to the immediate attention of the Administrator. As a result the number of overdue reports at the end of the fiscal year had decreased 50 per cent. This trend is continuing and it should be possible to eliminate all overdue reports except for a small number of cases in very isolated sections of the Province. The purpose of obtaining prompt reports on active cases is to ensure that the circumstances of a recipient are known in order to make an accurate calculation of the amount of allowance or assistance to which he is entitled.

The staff of the Field Services Branch have given outstanding service to the public and to the Department in the past year. As in previous years they have been able to perform their duties with the fullest measure of co-operation from local welfare officials, both municipal and private.

In concluding this report it is appropriate to refer briefly to the late F. G. McNeely, who passed away in January, 1959. As a member of the staff from 1934 he had given invaluable service to the Department and attained the greatest respect of those with whom he was associated in his work. He will be remembered particularly by the residents of the Peterborough area where he was not only a public servant but also a good and trusted friend.

HOMES FOR THE AGED BRANCH

With a constantly growing population and a larger proportion of the population entering the 65 years and over group, thanks to modern medical science, the problems connected with caring for and housing the elderly citizens continue to increase.

The lengthened life span means that a larger percentage of the total population require bed care or special care if they become senile. While the average family can look after their elderly members as long as they remain mobile, few families can care for a bed-ridden member who requires constant watching, nursing care or a senile member who requires constant watching for his or her own protection.

That is why the Ontario Government is placing special emphasis on the provision of bed care and special care sections in the new homes which are being built.

In addition to the improved physical care of residents in both municipally operated Homes for the Aged and Charitable Institutions, a great deal of attention is being paid to giving a full and happy life to the residents through interesting activities. This is being done by the creation of Ladies' Auxiliaries to the Homes. A Supervisor has been appointed to the Branch who helps in the formation of the Auxiliaries and subsequently teaches handicraft work to the members. They, in turn, teach the residents. In addition, the Ladies Auxiliaries perform many other useful tasks such as co-ordinating entertainments, running Tuck Shops, visiting residents, acting as a link between the local community and the Home, etc. In practically all cases the enthusiasm and the constantly increasing activities of the Ladies Auxiliaries is amazing. Without doubt, this comparatively new development has been the outstanding feature of improvements in the Homes during the year under review.

Homes for the Aged

One new additional Home with a bed capacity of 162 opened during the year would appear to represent a reduction in the building program this year compared with previous years. This is not strictly true as three new homes with a bed capacity of 626 were under construction. One of these is a replacement of an existing home and the other two are entirely new homes which will add to the list of existing homes. Also under construction were four additions and/or extensions which will add 211 beds to the growing total. Plans are being drawn for one complete new home with 219 beds and three additions and/or extensions. Eight complete new homes are contemplated and also three additions and/or extensions.

Attention is drawn to the Table entitled "Types of Home" in the statistical section following this Report. It clearly shows how the old congregate care type of home is rapidly being replaced by the modern type in which residents requiring different types of care are segregated.

Special Home Care

Some aged people who are able to care for themselves and who are eligible for admission to a Home for the Aged prefer to live in the local community. These may be admitted to special care approved homes which are supported by the Province and the local municipality. At the end of 1958, 157 were placed in private homes in eleven different municipalities.

Charitable Institutions

Charitable Institutions which are governed by various religious, fraternal and other groups complement the work of the municipally operated Homes for the Aged. During the year the construction of two new homes with a bed capacity of 201 was completed and additions and/or extensions to three existing homes giving 67 more beds were also completed. Six new homes were under construction. Four of these were replacements, with increased bed capacity, of existing homes while the other two were additional new homes. Plans were being drawn for an addition and/or extension to an existing home. Six complete new homes and one addition and/or extension are contemplated.

Attention is drawn to the Table entitled "Building Program". Charitable Institutions Act, 1949 to 1958. This gives a complete picture of the amount of construction completed and in the course of being completed under The Charitable Institutions Act.

Elderly Persons' Housing

This is still another category of Provincial subsidized accommodation for older citizens. It covers low rental housing for those able to care for themselves.

By the end of 1958 exactly 1,000 new dwelling units had been built in fourteen municipalities. At the same time 437 new dwelling units were under construction in three municipalities. One of these municipalities already had Elderly Persons' Housing and two were embarking on it for the first time. One municipality is contemplating additional construction and another is contemplating entering into this field for the first time. This contemplated construction covers 140 dwelling units.

Once again records have been achieved in the amount of accommodation made available (11,304 beds) and the utilization of the facilities (3,489,952 day's care registration) in municipally operated Homes for the Aged.

The proportions of bed and special care residents cared for in the municipally operated Homes have gone up from 50.6% at the beginning of the year to 52.2% at the end of the year and will probably continue to do so as more beds become available. It is of interest to note that empty beds exist in normal care but do not exist in bed and special care.

As mentioned previously, possibly the most outstanding feature of the year was the great improvement in general happiness of residents in the Homes through activities encouraged by the Home Auxiliaries. Coupled with this was a carefully fostered effort to promote good relations between the Homes and the local communities so that the residents would not feel they were cut off from community affairs. In other words, great efforts are being made to create as home-like an atmosphere as possible.

GENERAL WELFARE ASSISTANCE

Director's Report

During the fiscal year 1958/1959 The General Welfare Assistance Act replaced The Unemployment Relief Act with effect from January 1, 1959. In organized municipalities assistance is granted by the local municipal officials whereas in unorganized areas assistance is administered by the Provincial Regional Welfare Administrators.

Municipalities were responsible for only 20 per cent of the costs incurred for General Welfare Assistance. The Province reimbursed the municipalities at 80 per cent with the Federal Government contributing 50 per cent of the expenditure. In unorganized areas aid was paid on a 50/50 basis by the two senior Governments.

The Federal Government does not share in expenditures for medical services, dental extractions, and prosthetic appliances.

In the fiscal year under review improved accounting methods were introduced with the result payments were forwarded promptly to municipalities. This also facilitated the recovery of funds by the Province from the Federal Government, under the Unemployment Assistance Agreement.

Ontario Hospital Insurance coverage was made available to all General Welfare recipients residing in unorganized areas as a charge upon the Province.

Medical

Persons in receipt of assistance are entitled to receive free medical aid from the doctor of their choice, either in their own homes or in the doctor's office.

Dental

Emergency extractions where required, on recommendation of the municipal welfare administrator or provincial welfare administrator, were paid 100 per cent by the Province.

Accounts

There are 938 organized municipalities in the Province of Ontario and of these 786 or 83.8 per cent rendered accounts for the year under review. Of the 30 cities all submitted accounts. Out of 311 towns and villages 260 or 83.6 per cent submitted claims. Of 597 townships 496 or 83.1 per cent rendered accounts. During this fiscal year 786 municipalities submitted accounts compared to the past year's 755.

Expenditures

The gross expenditure for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1959, was $16,623,375, the Province contributing $6,379,594, the Federal Government $7,096,173, and the municipalities $3,147,608. Thus the gross increase ($7,117,832) over the previous year was 74.9 per cent.

Supplementary Assistance

Where there are extenuating circumstances an amount up to a maximum of $20 per month is granted to persons in receipt of Blind Persons' Allowances, Disabled Persons' Allowances, Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security. This assistance was mainly granted where there was a high shelter rate or costly drugs were required.

Number of Persons on Aid-March, 1959

During the month of March, 1959, there were 65,689 persons receiving assistance, whereas in March, 1958, the number was 48,690, an increase of 16,999 persons.

Age Group 65-70 and Over

In the month of March, 1959, 855 persons received assistance. Of these there were 539 persons between the ages of 65 and 69, whereas in March, 1958, there were 530 persons. In the age group 70 years and over there were 316 persons against 273 in March, 1958. This latter group were not eligible for Old Age Assistance or Old Age Security mainly due to residence.

Incapacitation Allowances

A maximum amount of $60 per month, plus medical services, was payable to persons coming within this category.

Prosthetic Appliances

Artificial arms and legs, braces and orthopaedic shoes have been supplied where such appliances were required, the cost being shared on a 80/20 basis with the municipality. The Province paid 100 per cent of the cost in unorganized territory. This type of assistance has helped reduce hospitalization costs. It has also made it possible for many to become self-supporting or to be able to assist in home duties.

Rehabilitation

Following the supply of prosthetic appliances and, where a rehabilitation course is beneficial, the person was trained to enable him to become gainfully employed. This program has shown very gratifying results and many persons previously unemployable have been placed in suitable employment.

Desertion

As in the past and especially in the year under review, constant attention has been given to the matter of desertion. With the co-operation of the municipal officials and provincial police, every effort has been made to apprehend the absconding person with the result a considerable number have been located. Reconciliations have been effected or court action followed through, thereby reducing the number of persons receiving assistance. The number of persons in the desertion category in March, 1959, was 1,634 compared to 1,470 in March, 1958. Taking into consideration the increase in population during the fiscal year there was no relative increase in this category.

Financial assistance covering transportation costs has been paid to municipalities where the head of a family has been returned to his place of residence.

Inter-Provincial

Each month a considerable number of persons were repatriated to their provinces of residence with such provinces agreeing to repatriation.

Nursing Home Care

Effective April 1, 1958, regulations were made under The General Welfare Assistance Act. 1958, providing aid to indigent persons requiring nursing home care. The Province shared with municipalities eighty per cent of the cost up to a maximum of $80, whichever was the lesser, on the basis that the Nursing Home was licensed under an approved By-law meeting the requirements of the Draft by-law submitted by the Province. A county as a whole may pass the required by-law to cover all municipalities in the county.

This program has been accepted by a number of municipalities in the Province and will expand considerably in the course of the next few months.

The net result of the Province assisting in this program is that the Nursing Homes have been brought up to a higher standard with the co-operation of the medical officers of health, municipal officials and fire marshal.

Immigrants

Assistance was granted to immigrants who were in ill health and had not resided in Canada for 12 months from the date of entry. The cost of aid granted was shared on a 50/50 basis between the Federal Government and the Province. Such aid was granted for a 12 month period from the day of illness or accident.

At the present time the agreement between the two senior Governments is under review for the immediate changing of the program to bring assistance under The General Welfare Assistance Act, 1958.

Reonomic Reports

Reports were received quarterly from the Regional Welfare Administrators showing the various economic trends throughout the Province.

Ceneral Welfare

This Branch continues to review numerous requests from municipalities, other Provinces, welfare agencies, and various departments of the Government for guidance and clearance in matters pertaining to welfare. Prompt attention is given by our Regional Welfare Administrators to all referrals made to them.

Sincere appreciation is extended to all municipal officials for their cooperation during the past year. Their assistance made it possible for the granting of aid and counselling to persons in necessitous circumstances.

Homemakers and Nurses Services

The Homemakers and Nurses Service Act was assented to August 1, 1958. This Act enables the Province to share with municipalities the cost of providing essential Home Care Services to families and individuals in the home. Families are assisted to remain together during a period of need or emergency. Elderly and handicapped persons are able to continue to live in their own homes even though requiring specialized care. This can be considered a workable alternative to hospitalization, foster homes or institutional care.

The Province shares with municipalities 50 per cent of the cost in an amount up to $2.50 per visit for nursing services and up to $8 per day or $1 per hour for a homemaker.

These services have proven to be an effective means of maintaining the family as a unit.

No subsidy is paid by the Federal Government under this program.

WELFARE ALLOWANCES

Old Age Assistance

Old Age Assistance continued to be available to persons in the 65-69 year age group on a means test basis, up to a maximum of $55 a month. There were no amendments to the federal act or regulations during the fiscal year under review. At March 31, 1959, there were 22,381 persons receiving assistance, just slightly better than one out of eight persons of the estimated population in the 65-69 year age group and 74.2 percent of the recipients received the maximum payment of fifty-five dollars. An average of 22,006 persons a month received assistance during the fiscal year, an increase of 6.6 percent over the previous year. Total payments to recipients increased from $11,394,698 in the previous year to $13,543,379 during 1958/59, an increase of 18.9 percent.

Applications for assistance were received from 8,424 persons as compared with 8,343 during 1957/58. During the year, 9,440 applications were fully reviewed, (8,198 were reviewed in the previous year) and 83.7 percent were approved for payment of assistance, the remainder being declined withdrawn or closed because of the death of applicants.

Blind Persons' Allowances

Allowances to blind persons in the age group 18-69 were paid under the conditions set out in the Blind Persons' Act (Canada), up to a maximum of $55 a month.

Payments amounting to $1,161,943 were made to an average of 1,794 persons a month during the year ending March 31, 1959. This was an increase of almost 18 percent over the expenditure during the previous year. At March 31, 1959, there were 1,833 recipients and 81.8 percent of this total received the maximum payment of fifty-five dollars.

Applications were received from 315 persons, a drop of 11 percent from the previous year. Of 443 applications disposed of during the year, 69.3 percent were approved for payment, 28.5 percent were declined and the remaining 2.2 percent were withdrawn or closed because of the death of applicants.

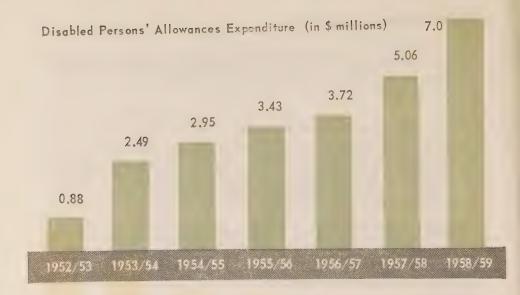

There were no amendments to the federal act or regulations during the year and the expenditures for allowances continued to be shared between the Governments of Ontario and Canada, with Ontario paying 25 percent of the costs.

Disabled Persons' Allowances

Allowances were provided to disabled persons, 18 years of age and over, up to a monthly maximum of $55 and shared equally by the Governments of Ontario and Canada.

Expenditures for allowances amounted to $6,996,804 during the fiscal year, an increase of 38.2 percent over the amount expended during 1957/58. The number of recipients continued to increase, reaching a total of 11,469 at the fiscal year end. During 1958/59, the monthly average number of recipients was 10,642, an increase of 22.2 percent over the previous year. The average payment per recipient for the month of March. 1959, was $53.88 and 92.7 percent of the recipients received the maximum payment of fifty-five dollars.

Applications were received from 4,602 persons during the year, 33 percent more than during 1957/58. In addition, 2,159 applications previously declined were reopened at the request of applicants. A total of 5.651 applications were reviewed during the year as compared with 3,872 during the previous year. Allowances were granted in 58.9 percent of the cases.

34.4 percent were declined chiefly on medical grounds, 5.5 percent of the applications were withdrawn and the remaining 1.2 percent were closed because of the death of applicants.

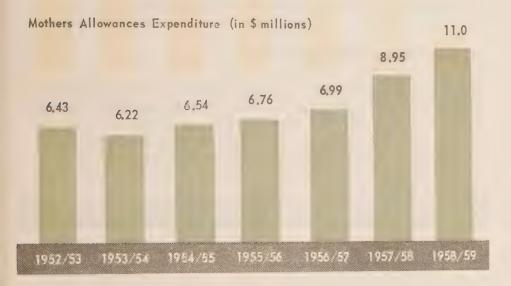

In the statistical tables which follow, are shown further details concerning applicants who were granted assistance, including the primary disabilities from which they suffer and particulars relating to applicants whose applications were not approved.

Mothers' Allowances

Monthly allowances, ranging from a maximum of $120 for a mother with one dependent child to a maximum of $180 for a family where there are 7 or more beneficiaries continued to be provided under the Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowance Act. Foster-mothers are paid a monthly allowance of $30 for one foster child, $55 a month for two foster children and $15 a month for each additional foster child.

The number of cases receiving the allowance during the year averaged 8,978 a month, an increase of 11.1 percent over 1957/58. At the fiscal year end there were 9,433 cases providing care to 22,632 children and covering a total of 32,401 beneficiaries. Expenditures for allowances increased from $8,947,401 during 1957/58 to $11,033,373 during the year ending March 31, 1959. This was an increase of 23.3 percent. The average payment per case in March, 1959 was $108.80 and the average per beneficiary was $31.67.

A total of 4,448 applications were reviewed during the year, of which 2,692 were approved for payment. Of the allowances granted, 27.8 percent were to widows and 31.6 percent to families with disabled fathers. The number of applications approved on behalf of children born out of wedlock declined from 22 percent of the total, in 1957/58 to 11.7 percent of the total granted during 1958/59. Of the 9,433 recipients receiving an allowance at March 31, 1959, 44.9 percent were widows and 26.7 percent of the cases were the result of the disability of the fathers. Desertion, divorce and imprisonment were the cause of economic dependency in 12.9 percent of the total caseload and 8.4 percent of all recipients were unwed mothers. Allowances on behalf of children in foster homes were paid in 5.5 percent of the total cases.

Commencing January 1, 1959, a plan of dental services for children under 16 years of age was introduced under an agreement between the Province and The Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario. Under the plan, the Province pays a monthly premium to the College for each child who is eligible.

The service includes preventive examinations, extractions, fillings, necessary radiographs and medication where required for the prevention or protection from disease.

In the three months during which the plan was in effect, an average of 20,362 children a month were eligible for dental care and the Province expended $42,760 for the service.

Medical Welfare Plan

Medical care, under an agreement between the Province and the Ontario Medical Association, continued to be made available to recipients of old age assistance and blind persons' allowances, except those who were patients in hospitals for the mentally ill, and to persons receiving disabled persons' allowances. All beneficiaries under the mothers' allowances program were included in this service, as were approximately 79,000 pensioners under the federal Old Age Security Act. An expenditure of $1,824,844 was made by the Province under this plan.

Hospital Care Insurance Plan

The Hospital Care Insurance Plan, which came into effect on January 1, 1959 is made available to certain recipients of public assistance at no cost to the recipients. Included under the plan on a premium-free basis, are recipients of old age assistance, blind persons' allowances, disabled persons' allowances, beneficiaries under the Mothers' Allowances Act and Old Age Security pensioners who are eligible to receive medical welfare services from the Province.

A total of 147,406 persons in these categories were insured under the plan at March 31, 1959.

Rehabilitation Services

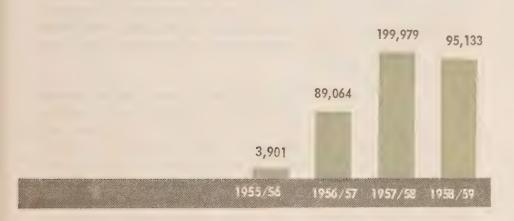

The vocational rehabilitation program established in 1956 has continued to serve persons suffering from physical or mental handicaps. Through counselling, vocational training and job placement, an increasing number of disabled persons have been assisted in overcoming their handicaps and in becoming self-supporting and tax contributing members of society.

Throughout the year, some 457 persons were referred for assessment. The Departmental Selection Committee approved 273 applications for vocational training. Two hundred and forty commenced training, while for 184 vocational training did not provide the answer. These were either placed directly in employment or being too handicapped to become employable, were referred for assistance under the Disabled Persons' Allowances Act or other public assistance programs.

Persons who can benefit from assistance under this program may be referred directly to the Rehabilitation Services Branch, any of the Department's seventeen Regional Offices, or through an approved private agency which provides services for special categories of handicapping disabilities. Each person who is accepted for assistance undergoes a thorough assessment in order to help him determine the type of training or job for which he is best suited. Medical assessment is obtained through his attending physician, hospital clinic, or rehabilitation centre. Social, vocational assessment and counselling are provided by rehabilitation counsellors of the Branch and in some cases by private rehabilitation organizations, or special vocational counselling services.

Rehabilitation Services Expenditure

If medical treatment or prosthetic appliances are required, these are obtained under the General Welfare Assistance Act, with the assistance of the municipality, or through private organizations, such as the Rehabilitation Foundation for Poliomyelitics and the Orthopaedically Disabled, or the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. For those handicapped persons who require the provision of a new skill in order to obtain employment, the Branch, in co-operation with the federal government, pays for the cost of tuition, maintenance and transportation.

A review of the handicapped persons who actually commenced courses of training indicates that the major type of disability continues to be tuberculosis (39%), with neurological and neuro-psychiatric disorders (28%), and orthopaedic impairments (23%) following in that order. At the same time, it is apparent that last year's downward trend in persons with tuberculosis and increase in persons suffering from mental impairment has become more marked. The experience of this year supports a forecast of increasing referrals of persons with mental illness and retardation, particularly as Associations for Retarded Children and the Ontario Hospitals expand their rehabilitation efforts.

Referrals came from many sources. However, the provincial Departments of Welfare and Health provided one-half, while the private health and welfare agencies referred slightly more than one-third.

The occupations in which rehabilitants were placed in 1958/59 included nearly all types of work ranging from simple unskilled assembly tasks to professional occupations, such as teaching and engineering. The proportions employed in the major occupational groups remained similar to those placed in past years, with clerical positions providing over 50% of the employment opportunities.

Another gratifying phase of the provincial rehabilitation program has been the continuing co-operation of the private organizations and the creation and expansion of new rehabilitation facilities. Many communities have recognized the value of comprehensive rehabilitation centres and community rehabilitation committees in providing constructive aid for their handicapped people and in supplanting the services provided by the Province. In Windsor, Ottawa, Kingston and Hamilton, four centres operating on an experimental basis obtained full-time Executive Directors and embarked on an active rehabilitation program, providing physical restorative services, vocational evaluation and counselling. In addition, the Jewish Vocational Service in Toronto initiated a specialized program of work assessment and adjustment. The work of these centres has been related to the provincial program through the Department's rehabilitation counsellors who have assisted with vocational counselling, training and placement.

The extent to which the vocational rehabilitation program has improved the economic status of handicapped persons, relieved dependency on public assistance, and increased the province's productive capacity was strikingly shown in 1958/59. Practically all of the 197 persons who were prepared for and placed in employment during the fiscal year were unemployed when referred for vocational rehabilitation. Approximately 60% of those persons rehabilitated were in receipt of public assistance. In the first full year of employment for the entire group, it is estimated that they would have earned $782,858.00, or $625,973.11 in excess of $156,884.89, the total cost involved in their training.

During the fiscal year 1958/59 the Indian Advisory Committee met five times in the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, bringing the total of such meetings to twenty-three since the Committee first met on May 6th, 1955.

The Committee maintained the same membership as in previous years—Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman, Mr. Webster E. White, Mrs. Benson Brant. Visits were made by members of the Committee to Curve Lake and Alderville Reservations and also the Indian Reservations in the vicinity of Kenora, including the Rat Portage Reservation.

Mr. Elliott Moses, Chairman of the Committee, attended the National Citizenship Seminar at Minaka in August, 1958, and was able to present some aspects of the Indian problem in Ontario.

During the course of the year many topics were discussed as a result of the Committee's visitations and presentations made to it from various sources. These topics included:

Agreements with Children's Aid Societies,

General Welfare Assistance,

Mothers' and Dependent Children's Allowances,

Medical Services,

Municipal Status of Reservations,

Historical material,

Taxing of summer cottages on Indian reservations,

Education of non-treaty Indians after public school,

Rehabilitation services for Indians,

Liquor referenda,

Full citizenship of Indians,

Equal rights for Indian women.

At the Committee's meeting on January 27th, 1959, discussion ensued in regard to the preparation and presentation of a brief to the Joint House of Commons and Senate Committee on Indian Affairs and the revision of the Indian Act. This discussion continued into the next fiscal year.

Two hundred and twenty-two widows of soldiers who were killed or died as a result of service in World War I were assisted by the Kathleen Hammond Fund to a total amount of $12,016.28. This operation resulted in an expenditure of $5,795.68 over revenue for the year. The last survey undertaken by the Commission with the assistance of the Department of Veterans Affairs disclosed that there are approximately 4,000 widows in Ontario who are eligible for assistance in accordance with the wishes of the late Kathleen Hammond as expressed in her will.

In addition to interviews and the necessary details required in handling grants the staff of the Commission is continuously engaged in negotiation with individuals and firms to whom ex-service people in trouble owe money. Successful negotiation by our staff and the staffs of other benevolent funds with whom we co-operate conserves the moneys available to the Commission and permits assistance to an increased number of veterans than would otherwise be possible, for example:

debts totalling $52,578.26 were settled for $38,077.82

Participation by other organizations amounted to $33,642.98, resulting in an outlay of only $4,434.84 by the Commission insofar as these particular accounts were concerned.

If the staff of the Commission did not carry out this type of negotiation and if we did not have the co-operation and assistance of other funds the Commission could not function effectively on the money available to it. A copy of the auditor's report has already been forwarded to the Minister's Office.

I record the appreciation of the Commissioners for the assistance rendered to the Commission by the Department of Welfare with special and particular mention of the co-operation received from the Deputy Minister, Mr. Jas. S. Band, and Mr. A. T. Bosanquet.

^{*}The apparent increase in the average cost of rehabilitation does not reflect an actual rise in expenses, but rather may be attributed to the fact that those persons rehabilitated during 1957/58 were short term trainees. During the present and the next two or three years, more long-term trainees will be rehabilitated. This will inevitably increase the average cost per person.
